

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

P R E F A C E.

THE object of this little book is to help those who are beginning Greek to learn from the first to write the language as well as read it. There is among many teachers a strong belief (which I am inclined to share) that Greek is mastered much more effectively if a little writing be combined with the reading, even from the earliest stages. The great inferiority of the knowledge of Greek acquired at schools, as compared with Latin, is partly, no doubt, due to the language being harder and begun later, but partly also to the fact that Latin writing is cultivated from the first, while Greek writing is so commonly neglected.

The difficulties of Greek composition fall naturally into three heads,—difficulties of Accidence, of Syntax, and of Idiom. Speaking broadly, this book is meant to deal chiefly with the first, and so may serve as a first stage (for those who mean to pursue the study) to my Introduction to Greek Prose Composition,¹ which deals with the other two sets of difficulties included under the head of Syntax and Idiom.

In reality, of course, it is neither possible nor desirable that this distinction should be rigidly maintained, as there are questions both of Syntax and Idiom which will occur in the most elementary composition. Thus, if we take the sentence, 'I used that horse which I had bought,' while it would be difficult to find a more simple one, still it undoubtedly involves two points of Syntax—that χρῶμαι, 'I use,' requires the Dative case, and that ἐκεῖνος, 'that,' requires the Article,—and two points of Idiom—that the Relative is attracted (not δν, but φ) to the case of the antecedent, and that the Greeks would probably say, not 'had bought,' but 'bought,' so that the whole sentence would be ἐχρησάμην ἐκεῖνω τῷ ἵππῳ, φ ἐπριάμην. Points such as these, which one may call the elements of Syntax and Idiom, will be found treated here with tolerable completeness. Thus the student will learn the use of the Tenses, the use of the Cases, the use of Participles, the use of the Genitive Absolute, all of which belong to the simple sentence, and are really quite easily grasped at an early stage. And I have introduced also from time to time the easier and commoner forms of even the Compound Sentence; the Accusative and Infinitive (familiar from Latin), the use of πρὶν and ὥστε with the Infinitive, the easy rules about ἵνα, and the two simplest cases of ἄν. In this way I have endeavoured to lead the student to the point at which he may take to more advanced books of Greek prose composition, or, if the teacher prefers, may do pieces selected from English narratives.

I have further endeavoured to make the book progressive from the beginning. The first few Exercises require no knowledge, except of the A Declension. After that we advance to the other Declensions, then to the easier Tenses of the Verbs, then the harder Tenses, etc. The same progressive character I have kept, or tried to keep, in introducing the usages; thus the Participial usages begin in Exercise 35, the Genitive Absolute in 50, Construction of 'Knowing' Verbs in 73, 'Final' Clauses in 79, and so on.

The same plan has been adhered to which was adopted in my Greek Prose Composition, of giving all the Exercises in a narrative form. This plan, which is intended to diminish the dulness of doing English into Greek, is even more desirable at the early stages of composition than at the later, inasmuch as the boys are younger, and the Accidence must in any case be great drudgery. It is not at all necessary that anything of value should be sacrificed in adopting this plan, if proper care be taken. The main difficulty, of course, was in the first Exercises, where only a few Substantives and Adjectives are supposed to be known; but this was got over by writing out the three tenses of the verb 'to be,' and, whenever any other verbs were used, giving the part required. Thus from the first the Exercises are more or less connected wholes, and the plan of familiarising the learner with certain common forms of the Verb before he comes to learn them, seemed not only unobjectionable but advantageous.

I have given all the new words used in each Exercise in a Vocabulary at the head of it, and *all*¹ the words of all the Exercises in the collected Vocabulary at the end. Thus, if the learner remembers the words he had already had, he will want no help but his Accidence and the page before him; if he forgets them, he will simply have to turn to the Vocabulary at the end. In the Vocabularies I have given the stems of the Substantives, and the Genders where doubtful, and, after the Exercises, a list of the Irregular Verbs used in them.

OXFORD.

¹ Or nearly all: sometimes synonyms of words already used are withheld, to encourage sharpness: sometimes, when the English word has several senses, it is more instructive to look it out in the Vocabulary at the end.

NOTE TO THIRD EDITION.

I have to thank the Rev. J. S. WALFORD for most kindly sending me a careful list of errata which has enabled me to make several corrections.

THE ARTICLE.

§ 1. The Article ὁ ἡ τό gives a good deal of trouble to the learner before its use is fully mastered, and it is best therefore to explain the main points about it at the very first.

There is no word in Greek for a, an: it is simply omitted: or the Indefinite Pronoun τις, 'a certain one,' is used. The Greek Article means the, and it is used (broadly speaking) wherever we use the, but also in some places where we do not. It is these latter which constitute the difficulty to the beginner.

§ 2. Position of the Article with Adjectives.

In English we say 'the bad man;' and if we wish to translate this into Greek, the point to observe is that the adjective must have the article.

The order of Adjectives and Substantives may be inverted if we please. Thus we may say either ὁ κακὸς ἀνὴρ, or ὁ ἀνὴρ ὁ κακός; but in either case the Adjective must have the Article.

If this rule is broken, as it is often by beginners, and if we write ὁ ἀνὴρ κακός, or κακὸς ὁ ἀνὴρ, the phrase is still good Greek, but the meaning is quite altered; it is no longer 'the bad man,' but 'the man is bad.' The adjective, by being deprived of the article, has ceased to be an attribute, and has become a predicate.

§ 3. The Article with Adjectives.

The Article is sometimes used in English with only an Adjective, the Substantive being understood. This is also a Greek idiom, but is a great deal more frequent than in English, especially in the neuter. Examples:—

The wise [men].	The bad-tempered person.
οἱ σώφρονες.	ὁ δύσκολος.
The Beautiful [abstract].	Troublesome things.
τὸ καλόν.	τὰ ἀνιαρά.
Uncertainty.	Other people's country.
τὸ ἀστάθμητον.	ἡ ἄλλοτρία.

§ 4. The Article with Adjectives of Position.

One usage must be carefully observed. When the Article is used with adjectives of position, the Adjective comes first, outside the Article. Thus:—

On the top of the hill. ἐπ' ἀκροῦ τοῦ λόφου.
In the middle of the road. ἐν μέσῃ τῇ ὁδῷ.

So with πᾶς, as often in English:—

All the men. πάντες οἱ ἄνθρωποι.
All night long. πᾶσαν τὴν νύκτα.

§ 5. The Article with Participles.

Just as we have seen above in the case of the Adjective, so in English we can in a few cases use the Article with Participles (whether the Substantive is expressed or only understood does not matter); such as the following:—‘The living,’ ‘the dead,’ ‘the defeated cavalry,’ ‘the coming man,’ ‘the insufficiently apprehended truth,’ etc. In Greek there is no limit to this use. The following are a few examples:—

The cause of what occurred.

ἡ αἰτία τοῦ γενομένου.

The events which have happened.

τὰ γεγενημένα.

The survivors.

οἱ περιγενόμενοι.

Expediency, duty, etc.

τὸ συμφέρον, τὸ δέον, etc.

The thing asked for.

τὸ αἰτούμενον.

And so with longer phrases:—

The men who took their share in this perilous undertaking.

οἱ τοῦδε τοῦ κινδύνου ξυναράμενοι ἄνδρες.

All the actions done by me for the good of the city.

πάντα τὰ ἔμοι ἐπ’ ἀγαθῶ τῆς πόλεως πεπραγμένα.

Constantly, therefore, when in English we have a relative sentence with a verb, in Greek we have simply a phrase (coupled to the noun) with Article and Participle.

§ 6. The Article with Adverbial Clauses, etc.

Another very natural extension of the use of the Article in Greek is the following:—Instead of saying, as we might by § 5, οἱ ἐκ τῆς πόλεως ἐλθόντες, ‘the people who had come out of the city,’ since the sense is quite clear without the Participle, we can often say simply—οἱ ἐκ τῆς πόλεως, ‘the people from the city.’

So a vast number of convenient phrases:—

The bean that was below.

ὁ κύαμος ὁ κάτωθεν.

Those who were there.

οἱ ἐκεῖ.

The things of old.

τὰ πάλαι.

What happened afterwards.

τὰ ἐνθένδε, οἱ τὰ ἔπειτα.

The camp on the mountain.

τὸ στρατόπεδον τὸ ἐπὶ τοῦ ὄρους.

§ 7. Observe: it is very important for turning into Greek to notice whether such a clause as those given above belongs to the Substantive or not. On this will depend whether we have to put the Article or not.

Thus, compare the two sentences—

(1.) I killed the stranger from Corinth.

(2.) I killed the stranger in the street.

It is clear that in (1) ‘from Corinth’ belongs to the ‘stranger;’ while in (2) ‘in the street’ belongs not to 'stranger,' but to the verb. In English, the sense only is our guide, not the structure. In Greek we know at once what is meant from the use of the Article.

Thus (1) is τὸν ξένον τὸν ἀπὸ Κορίνθου ἔκτεινα, and (2) is τὸν ξένον ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ ἔκτεινα.

Again, in some cases exactly the same phrase may either require the Article or not, according to circumstances. It depends on the principle above enunciated, namely, that the adverbial phrase without the Article belongs to the Verb, with the Article to the Substantive. Thus:—

I conceived a suspicion about him.

ὑποψίαν ἔλαβον περὶ αὐτοῦ.

I went away from suspicion about him.

ἀπῆλθον ὑποψία τῇ περὶ αὐτοῦ.

§ 8. The Article with the Infinitive.

The neuter Article τό is also very conveniently used with the Infinitive, where we use the gerund-form or verbal substantive in -ing. Thus:—

Singing is difficult.

τὸ ᾄδειν χαλεπὸν ἐστὶ.

Many things are done by trying.

πολλὰ τῷ πειρᾶσθαι περαίνεται.

Skilled in shooting.

ἐμπειροσ τοῦ τοξεύειν.

Or, if there is a subject to the Verb, the Accusative and Infinitive is used, as might be expected :—

We were beaten owing to our allies running away.
 ἐνικήθημεν διὰ τὸ [τοὺς ξυμμάχους ἀποδρᾶναι].

That the invaders have been worsted is a great gain.

§ 9. The Article with Demonstratives.

Another point about the Article is its use with Demonstratives, which differs from the English usage, and therefore is important to observe.

Whenever 'this' or 'that' comes in English with a Substantive, the Article must come in the Greek with the Substantive, though the 'this' or 'that' may be either before after the Substantive.¹ Thus :—

This word.

οὗτος ὁ λόγος, or ὁ λόγος οὗτος.

Those enemies.

ἐκεῖνοι οἱ πολέμοι, or οἱ πολέμοι ἐκεῖνοι.

The same is true of ὅδε.

§ 10. The Article with Substantives.

There are even with Substantives some cases where the English use of the differs from the Greek. Some of these are too subtle to be worth troubling about at an early stage : they will be learnt after. But some are quite easy, such as the following cases, where in English the Article is omitted, but in Greek is inserted :—

(a.) Class names (often).

Men are strong : women are weak.

οἱ μὲν ἄνδρες ἰσχυροί, ἀσθενεῖς δὲ αἱ γυναῖκες.

Greeks are often philosophers.

οἱ Ἕλληνες πολλάκις φιλόσοφοί εἰσι.

Large fish are easily caught.

ῥαδίως ἀλίσκονται αἱ μακρὰ ἰχθύες.

Ears are more beautiful than tails.

τὰ ὦτα καλλίω τῶν κέρκων.

(b.) Abstract.

Truth is hard to find.

χαλεπὴ εὐρεῖν ἢ ἀλήθεια.

You are superior in piety.

NEUTER PLURAL.

§ II. In Greek a Neuter Plural Noun requires the Singular Verb. Thus :—

These things are so.

ταῦτα οὕτως ἐστίν.

The trees are tall.

τὰ δένδρα ἐστὶ μακρά.

I will tell you what happened.

λέξω ἅπερ ἐγένετο.

PRONOUNS.

§ 12. The Personal Pronouns.

The Personal Pronouns are used just as they are in English, for the most part: the exceptions being the following:—

(1.) Often omitted with Verbs.

Since the Verbs in Greek by their terminations show what person (1st, 2d, or 3d Singular or Plural) is the Nominative to them (just as is the case in Latin, but mostly not the case in English), it is clear that the Personal Pronouns in the Nominative may be frequently omitted. In fact they will only be put in when there is any emphasis upon them, or otherwise need of them for clearness. Thus:—

I went down to the city.

κατέβην εἰς τὴν πόλιν.

You think rightly.

καλῶς δοξάζετε.

He ordered me to stop.

ἐκέλευσέ με μείναι.

We will talk to one another.

διαλεξόμεθα ἀλλήλοις.

§ 13. (2.) Inserted when Emphatic.

On the other hand, if there is any stress upon the person, the Pronoun must of course be put in, as—

The rest were away, but you were there.

οἱ μὲν ἄλλοι ἀπήσαν, σὺ δὲ παρήσθα.

This will naturally be done when in a narrative a new sentence begins with a new Nominative or subject. Thus:—

They came to me and asked me to go with them. But I replied that I would not consent.

καὶ οἱ μὲν ἦλθον πρὸς ἐμέ, καὶ ᾗτησαν συνέπεσθαι αὐτοῖς.
ἐγὼ δὲ οὐκ ἔφην πείσεσθαι.

§ 14. (3.) The Third Personal Pronoun.

The Third Person in Greek requires a little care. The fact is, that while there is a Greek word for the Genitive, Dative, and Accusative of the Third Person, there is no proper Greek word for the Nominative (he, she, it, they) except with the particles μὲν and δὲ, which can only occur at the beginning of a sentence or clause. This is simply due to the fact that it is not wanted. Let us consider the various cases where he (etc.) is used in English.

(a.) Where there is no emphasis or stress on the person, and it is quite clear who is meant, there is no need in Greek of a Pronoun at all. See § 12.

And having said this, he died.

καὶ ταῦτα εἰπὼν ἐτελεύτησε.

He collected his army, and went off.

συλλέξας τὸ στράτευμα ἀπέφχετο.

(b.) At the beginning of clauses or new sentences in narrative, where the Pronouns are required for clearness, ὁ μὲν and ὁ δὲ can be used. It should be mentioned that μὲν is not used except with a δὲ clause corresponding and following after it. Thus:—

And they departed, but she stayed.

καὶ οἱ μὲν ἀπῆλθον, ἡ δὲ ἔμεινεν.

He feasted, but I slept.

ὁ μὲν οὔν ἐδείπνει, ἐγὼ δὲ καθήυδον.

And when Cinadon was brought up, the Ephors asked him about the matter. And he replied . . .

ὡς δὲ ἀνήχθη ὁ Κινάδων, ἤρουντο αὐτὸν οἱ ἔφοροι περὶ τοῦ πράγματος. ὁ δὲ ἀπεκρίνατο . . .

(c.) When the he (etc.) is emphatic, then οὗτος or ἐκείνος, the Demonstratives, are used.

He at least will not flee.
οὔποτε ἐκείνός γε φεύξεται.

They allowed their enemies to live, and shall we kill them?
ἐκείνοι μὲν τοὺς πολεμίους εἶων ζῆν, ἡμεῖς δὲ ἀποκτενοῦμεν;

It is strange if he shall do it.
δεινὸν εἰ οὗτός γε δράσει.

Oblique Cases.

Thus much about the Nominative of the Third Personal Pronoun. The Oblique Cases are simple: for whenever a word is required at all (which is less often than in English), the oblique cases of αὐτός are used. A few instances will suffice:—

They killed him.
ἀπέκτειναν αὐτόν.

I gave it her.
ἔδωκα αὐτῇ.

I drank it.
ἔπιον, or ἔπιον αὐτό.

He cut off their heads.
ἀπέταμον τὰς κεφαλὰς αὐτῶν.

When to use it and when to omit it, the learner can only find out by practice; but he is certain at first to put it in a great deal too often, since the Pronoun is commoner in English than in Greek.

§ 16.

αὐτός is a puzzling word for the beginner, owing to its various uses, for 'self,' 'him,' and 'the same.' It is necessary for him to go fully into the matter, and constantly refer to the explanation and examples, until he is familiar with them.

(1.) 'The same' is always ὁ αὐτός; the Article coming before αὐτός. Thus:—

The same man.

ὁ αὐτὸς ἀνὴρ.

Of the same woman.

τῆς αὐτῆς γυναικός.

(2.) 'Self' (if it is not reflexive) is αὐτός without the Article before it. Thus:—

He himself said it.

αὐτὸς εἶπεν.

These men themselves were killed.

οὗτοι οἱ ἄνδρες αὐτοὶ ἀπέθανον.

At their own request he came.

[i.e. themselves asking.] αὐτῶν ἀξιούντων ἦλθεν.

The wall of the city itself.

τὸ τεῖχος αὐτῆς τῆς πόλεως.

He said he himself had done it.

εἶφη αὐτὸς δεδρακέναι.

It is needful for you to go yourself there.

ἀνάγκη σὲ ἐκεῖσε αὐτὸν ἐλθεῖν (not σεαυτόν).

I must do it myself.

ἐμὲ δεῖ αὐτὸν ποιεῖν (not ἐμαντόν).

(3.) If it is reflexive [i.e. if it refers to the same person as the subject to the verb, and is in an oblique case, and is not a subject itself] use ἑαυτοῦ (ἑμᾶυτοῦ, σεαυτοῦ), or the less formal οἶ, οἱ, εἶ; and in plural, σφῶν, οἱ σφῶν αὐτῶν, οἱ ἑαυτῶν (ἡμῶν αὐτῶν, ὑμῶν αὐτῶν). Thus:—

He went to his own home.

πρὸς τὸν ἑαυτοῦ οἶκον ἀπήει.

They replied to themselves.

ἀντεῖπον ἑαυτοῖς, οἱ σφίσι αὐτοῖς.

Know thyself.

γινῶθι σεαυτόν.

I will kill myself.

ἀποκτενῶ ἑμᾶυτόν.

We fear lest it be bad for ourselves.

φοβούμεθα μὴ ἡμῖν αὐτοῖς κακὸν ᾖ.

(4.) αὐτός in the oblique cases is also used for the cases of 'he,' 'she,' 'it,' 'they,' as we have seen above in treating of the Pronouns, § 15.

§ 17.

'Him' Reflexive.

NOTE 1.—It should be, however, observed, that in English we do not always say 'himself,' but often simply 'him' ('her,' 'it,' etc.), even where the Pronoun is really reflexive. Thus:—

They knew he was hostile to them.

ᾔδεσαν αὐτὸν σφίσι ἐχθρὸν ὄντα.

He said it was his cloak.

[his = of himself.]

ἔφη ἑαυτοῦ εἶναι τὸ ἱμάτιον.

He took it away with him.

ἀπέφερε μεθ' ἑαυτοῦ.

§ 18. Article to express 'His.'

NOTE 2.—Often again, where in English 'his,' etc., is used reflexive, and where we might say in Greek 'of himself,' ἑαυτοῦ, it is enough, if no stress is laid on the Pronoun, to use the Article simply. Thus :—

He hurt his head.
τὴν κεφαλὴν ἐτραυμάτισε.

See fuller explanation in § 21.

§ 19. 'It' in English.

The beginner should be cautioned about the use of the English 'it,' a Pronoun which stands for every inanimate Substantive and most animals. In Greek, on the contrary, the Pronoun has naturally to be of the gender of the Noun for which it stands.

He left the gold, for he knew it [χρυσὸς, Masculine] would be safe.

. . . τοῦτον ἀσφαλῆ ἐσόμενον.

The dove approached: he pulled it in [περιστερὰ, Feminine].

§ 20. Possessive.

With the exception treated below, the Possessive Pronouns are used pretty much as in English. It is only necessary to mention that there is no Possessive for the third person, and accordingly the Genitive of the Personal Pronoun is used instead, αὐτοῦ, αὐτῆς, αὐτῶν, or, if reflexive, ἑαυτοῦ, ἑαυτῆς, ἑαυτῶν. The others are ἐμός (mine), σός (thine), ὑμέτερος (yours), ἡμέτερος (ours). Thus :—

τὴν ἐμὴν ἀσπίδα ἔλαβε.

He is your father.

σὸς πᾶτηρ ἐστί.

He slew their wives.

τὰς γυναῖκας αὐτῶν ἀπέκτεινε.

Observe that the Article is used with the Possessives (ἐμός, σός, etc.), except where the Substantive with the Possessive is a predicate, i.e. comes after the verb 'to be.'

§ 21. NOTE.—The exception alluded to above is this. In English the Possessive occurs much oftener than in Greek : it is used with no emphasis at all, where there could be no doubt (if it were omitted) whose the thing was. In such a case as that, it is usual in Greek to employ the Article only.

For example—

They took up their arms and retreated.

[Here there is no emphasis on 'their': if nothing was said as to whose arms, you would naturally assume they took their own : and accordingly in Greek it would be more usual to say 'the arms.']

τὰ ὄπλα λαβόντες ἀπεχώρουν.

Other instances are the following, which will not need comment :—

Come with your wife.

ἔλθε μετὰ τῆς γυναικός.

He prospered all his life.

πάντα τὸν βίον εὐτύχει.

They defend their country.

τῇ πόλει βοηθοῦσι.

We shall finish our task.

τὸ ἔργον περανοῦμεν.

Common sense will settle, in more complicated sentences, whether the Article or the Possessive is best. Thus :—

He sent his slave to their house.

ἔπεμψε τὸν δούλον πρὸς τὴν ἐκείνων οἰκίαν.

They sent their slave to their house.

ἔπεμψαν τὸν δούλον πρὸς τὴν οἰκίαν.

Because in the second the persons concerned are the same all through ; in the first they are changed.

ἄλλος, ἄλλοτε, etc.

Two idiomatic uses of ἄλλος and its compounds are to be noticed.

(1.) When two are opposed, corresponding to the English use of some . . . others.

Some were rich, others poor.

ἄλλοι μὲν πλούσιοι ἦσαν, ἄλλοι δὲ πένητες.

Sometimes I ate : at other times I fasted.

ἄλλοτε μὲν ἤσθιον, ἄλλοτε δὲ ἐπείνων.

different, as ‘different people went different ways,’ or use a complex though accurate form of sentence, as follows:—‘One person went one way and another another.’

In Greek this is done more neatly by an idiomatic use of ἄλλος.

One went one way and another another.

Different things are thought beautiful in different places.

ἄλλα ἄλλαχού καλά.

Different courses pleased different people at different times.

He spoke as follows.

τοιᾶδε ἔλεξε.

Having thus spoken.

τοιαῦτα λέξας.

On these terms (viz., on such terms as I have said).

τοιοῦτος is often used in Greek where in English another adjective might occur, especially where the sense of the adjective has been given before, or where τσοῦτος is used with it.

So many and so soft rugs.

τοσοῦτοι καὶ τοιοῦτοι τάπητες.

The island is barren, it is difficult to live in so unproductive a land.

ἐρήμη ἡ νῆσος, ὥστε ἐν τοιαύτῃ γῆ οὐ ῥάδιον ζῆν.

§ 25. Relative and Interrogative.

The learner is puzzled at first often by the English word what, owing to its being both relative [= 'that which'], and interrogative [= 'what?'].

The best rule is to stop and think whether the sentence remains the same in meaning after substituting 'that which' for 'what.' If so, a Relative is required. Otherwise it will be an Interrogative. [Sometimes either will make sense, and then it clearly does not matter.]

(1.) Interrogative.

I investigated what was going on.

ἐσκόπουν τί γίνεται.

No one could tell me what was the cause.

οὐδεὶς ἤδει τί εἶη τὸ αἴτιον.

(2.) Relative.

He laughed at what I had done.

κατεγέλα ὃν ἔδρασα.

What he did yesterday delights all.

πάντες ἠδονται ἐφ' οἷς ἐχθές ἐποίησεν.

The cause of what happens.

ἡ πρόσδοδος τῶν πεπραμένων.

§ 26. Attraction.

When the Gender, Case, Mood, etc., of one word of a sentence is altered from what it would naturally be to suit the Gender, Case, Mood, etc., of some other word or words, such alteration is said to be due to attraction.

There are many forms of attraction in Greek, the commonest being the attraction of the Relative.

§ 27. Relative Attracted.

(1.) When the antecedent is in the Genitive or Dative, and the Relative would naturally be in Accusative, Attraction often takes place, i.e. the Relative may be put into the same case as the Antecedent.

None of the friends I have.

οὐδεὶς τῶν φίλων ὄν ἔχω (for οὐς).

I am pleased with the horse I keep.

(2.) This is still more frequent and idiomatic when the Antecedent is a mere Pronoun, which can be omitted. See § 25 (2).

I abide by what I have sworn.

ἐμμένω οἷς ὄμοσα.

I thank you for what you promised.

χάριν ἔχω σοι ὄν ὑπέσχου.

§ 28. Attraction of the Subject.

When the Subject is a Pronoun (this, that, etc.), and the Predicate a Substantive, the Subject is commonly attracted in Greek into the gender of the Predicate. Thus in English, if we were to say, 'this is a stone,' we should have no difficulty, as there are no genders concerned; but in translating into Greek we should perhaps at first be disposed to put 'this' neuter, meaning 'this thing.' The Greek idiom, however, is to make the gender of 'this' agree by attraction with the gender of 'stone.' Examples:—

This is a stone.

οὗτός ἐστι λίθος.

That was a dire calamity.

ἐκείνη ἦν δεινὴ συμφορά.

What is this disease?

§ 29. Use of ἕκαστος and ἐκάτερος.

The Distributive Pronouns ἐκάτερος and ἕκαστος have a special usage which arises from the nature of the word. A Plural Nominative is, so to speak, distributed into its component parts, and thus grammatically ἕκαστος appears in apposition with a plural. And as in Latin suus and quisque have a tendency to be close together, so in Greek ἕκαστος and ἑαυτοῦ. Thus:—

ἦλθον εἰς τὸν ἑαυτοῦ ἕκαστος οἶκον.

The women were doing each their own work.

αἱ γυναῖκες τὸ αὐτῆς ἐκάστη ἔργον εἰργάζοντο.

If the sentence is of any length (or even sometimes in short sentences), the Verb is singular to agree with ἕκαστος.

§ 30. Use of Neuter Adjective.

Just as in the case of the Article we have seen that the Adjective is used with Article in the neuter, where in English generally some Substantive is employed, so frequently the Adjective (or Pronoun) is used in the neuter (whether with or without Article), where in English Substantives are required. This is especially the case where the Substantive is of kindred meaning (cognate) with the Verb.

δεινὰ ἔπαθε.

They tell strange tales.

θαυμάσια μυθολογοῦσι.

He made the following reply.

§ 31. Predicative Adjective.

We have seen that if the Adjective has not the Article and the Substantive has, the Adjective is used with a predicative meaning, as—

The man is bad.

κακὸς ὁ ἀνὴρ.

This is obvious enough in the Nominative; but in Greek this predicative use of the Adjective without Article is extended also to other cases (known as Tertiary Predicate).

μεγάλην τὴν οἰκίαν ἔχεις.

Great was the enthusiasm which he had for him.

πολλῇ τῇ προθυμίᾳ.

Splendid was the

ἐπιπέσει τῆς πόλεως.

So where in English the predicative form is not used : often in speaking of qualities or parts of the body :—

He had large ears.

μεγάλα εἶχε τὰ ὦτα.

I have a rough temper.

τραχεῖαν ἔχω τὴν ὀργήν.

He looked with unflinching eyes.

ὀρθοῖς τοῖς ὀμμασιν ἔβλεψε.

So again, where the adjective describes rather the result of the action (proleptic), which in English may be expressed variously :—

Raising his voice he spoke.

μεγάλῃ τῇ φωνῇ εἶπε.

(With the voice high.)

Composing his face to a solemn look.

σεμνὴν διαθεῖς τῆν ὄψιν.

There is a special idiom in the construction of δῆλος and φανερός, also due to attraction. See § 26.

In English we say, 'It is evident that you are ill;' 'that-you-are-ill' being logically the subject of the verb 'is-evident.' In Greek, however, the person is made the subject, and the sentence becomes 'You are evident being ill,' or δῆλος εἶ νοσῶν. In the following examples the English is purposely varied :—

It became clear that she was mad.

You will be proved to have erred.

δῆλοι γενήσεσθε ἀμαρτόντες.

It was evident they would die.

φανεροὶ ἦσαν θανούμενοι.

§ 30. Use of Neuter Adjective.

Just as in the case of the Article we have seen that the Adjective is used with Article in the neuter, where in English generally some Substantive is employed, so frequently the Adjective (or Pronoun) is used in the neuter (whether with or without Article), where in English Substantives are required. This is especially the case where the Substantive is of kindred meaning (cognate) with the Verb.

δεινὰ ἔπαθε.

θαυμάσια μυθολογοῦσι.

He made the following reply.

§ 31. Predicative Adjective.

We have seen that if the Adjective has not the Article and the Substantive has, the Adjective is used with a predicative meaning, as—

The man is bad.

κακὸς ὁ ἀνὴρ.

This is obvious enough in the Nominative; but in Greek this predicative use of the Adjective without Article is extended also to other cases (known as Tertiary Predicate).

μεγάλην τὴν οἰκίαν ἔχεις.

Great was the enthusiasm with which we followed him.

πολλῇ τῇ προθυμίᾳ συνειπόμεθα αὐτῷ.

Splendid was the city he ruled.

ἰσχυρὰς τῆς πόλεως ἦρχε.

So where in English the predicative form is not used : often in speaking of qualities or parts of the body :—

He had large ears.

μεγάλα εἶχε τὰ ὦτα.

I have a rough temper.

τραχείαν ἔχω τὴν ὀργήν.

He looked with unflinching eyes.

ὀρθοῖς τοῖς ὄμμασιν ἔβλεψε.

Raising his voice he spoke.

μεγάλη τῇ φωνῇ εἶπε.

(With the voice high.)

Composing his face to a solemn look.

σεμνήν διαθείς τὴν ὄψιν.

There is a special idiom in the construction of δηλος and φανερός, also due to attraction. See § 26.

In English we say, 'It is evident that you are ill;' 'that-you-are-ill' being logically the subject of the verb 'is-evident.' In Greek, however, the person is made the subject, and the sentence becomes 'You are evident being ill,' or δηλος εἶ νοσῶν. In the following examples the English is purposely varied :—

It became clear that she was mad.

You will be proved to have erred.

δηλοὶ γενήσεσθε ἁμαρτόντες.

φανεροὶ ἦσαν θανούμενοι.

δηλός μοι ἦν σφαλεῖς ὁ πολέμιος.

§ 33. πολύς and μέγας.

When 'many' is used with another adjective, in Greek often καὶ is inserted between the two: we say in English 'many wonderful laws;' in Greek they say 'many and wonderful.' As—

Many strange marvels.

πολλὰ καὶ δεινὰ θαύματα.

Many clever things were said.

πολλὰ καὶ σοφὰ ἐλέγετο.

So again with the adjective 'great':—

A great fat man.

ἀνὴρ μέγας καὶ παχὺς.

A large black chest.

THE CASES.

§ 34. The use of the Cases will be best learnt by degrees, through the process of finding what each word governs, and so fixing the general principles in the mind. But it may be of some use to the learner to give a few general hints about them, to which he can refer from time to time.

The Nominative.

The Nominative is used exactly as in English, or any other language, as the subject of the verb. No rule is required.

After Passives, Substantive Verbs, etc., it is used exactly as in Latin. Thus:—

He is good.

οὗτός ἐστιν ἀγαθός.

She is trying to be thought beautiful.

πειρᾶται καλῆ νομίζεσθαι.

We are called just.

δίκαιοι καλούμεθα.

In one use only does Greek differ from other inflected languages with regard to the Nominative, and that is in what is called the Nominative Attraction. When in a clause of oratio obliqua the subject is the same as that of the principal verb, it is Nominative and not (as in Latin) Accusative. Thus :—

I say that you are good.

φημί σε ἀγαθὸν εἶναι.

I say that I am good.

φημί ἀγαθὸς εἶναι.

So with Participles :—

I know that you are good.

οἶδά σε ἀγαθὸν ὄντα.

I know that I am good.

οἶδα ἀγαθὸς ὢν.

For the principle which determines whether Infinitive or Participle is to be used, see below, § 40.

Genitive Case.

To understand fully all the uses of the Genitive case requires a long and difficult study, which it would be out of place to pursue here, but the learner may be helped even in the early stages by noticing the main usages.

(a.) Genitive of aim.

To shoot at a mark.

τοξεύειν σκοποῦ.

(So στοχάζομαι, ἐφίεσθαι, etc.)

Go home-wards.

§ 20. Possessive.

With the exception treated below, the Possessive Pronouns are used pretty much as in English. It is only necessary to mention that there is no Possessive for the third person, and accordingly the Genitive of the Personal Pronoun is used instead, αὐτοῦ, αὐτῆς, αὐτῶν, or, if reflexive, ἑαυτοῦ, ἑαυτῆς, ἑαυτῶν. The others are ἐμός (mine), σός (thine), ὑμέτερος (yours), ἡμέτερος (ours). Thus:—

τὴν ἐμὴν ἀσπίδα ἔλαβε.

He is your father.

σὸς πᾶτηρ ἐστί.

τὰς γυναῖκας αὐτῶν ἀπέκτεινε.

Observe that the Article is used with the Possessives (ἐμός, σός, etc.), except where the Substantive with the Possessive is a predicate, i.e. comes after the verb 'to be.'

§ 21. NOTE.—The exception alluded to above is this. In English the Possessive occurs much oftener than in Greek: it is used with no emphasis at all, where there could be no doubt (if it were omitted) whose the thing was. In such a case as that, it is usual in Greek to employ the Article only.

For example—

They took up their arms and retreated.

[Here there is no emphasis on 'their': if nothing was said as to whose arms, you would naturally assume they took their

τὰ ὄπλα λαβόντες ἀπεχώρουν.

Other instances are the following, which will not need comment :—

Come with your wife.	They defend their country.
ἔλθὲ μετὰ τῆς γυναικός.	τῇ πόλει βοηθοῦσι.
He prospered all his life.	We shall finish our task.
πάντα τὸν βίον εὐτύχει.	τὸ ἔργον περανοῦμεν.

He sent his slave to their house.
ἔπεμψε τὸν δούλον πρὸς τὴν ἐκείνων οἰκίαν.
They sent their slave to their house. ἔπεμψαν τὸν δούλον πρὸς τὴν οἰκίαν.

Because in the second the persons concerned are the same all through ; in the first they are changed.

§ 22. ἄλλος, ἄλλοτε, etc.

Two idiomatic uses of ἄλλος and its compounds are to be noticed.

(1.) When two are opposed, corresponding to the English use of some . . . others.

Some were rich, others poor.
ἄλλοι μὲν πλούσιοι ἦσαν, ἄλλοι δὲ πένητες.
Sometimes I ate : at other times I fasted.
ἄλλοτε μὲν ἤσθιον, ἄλλοτε δὲ ἐπείνων.

different, as ‘different people went different ways,’ or use a complex though accurate form of sentence, as follows:—‘One person went one way and another another.’

In Greek this is done more neatly by an idiomatic use of ἄλλος.

One went one way and another another.

Different things are thought beautiful in different places.

ἄλλα ἄλλαχού καλά.

Different courses pleased different people at different times.

He spoke as follows.

τοιάδε ἔλεξε.

Having thus spoken.

τοιαῦτα λέξας.

On these terms (viz., on such terms as I have said).

τοιοῦτος.

τοιοῦτος is often used in Greek where in English another adjective might occur, especially where the sense of the adjective has been given before, or where τοσοῦτος is used with it.

So many and so soft rugs.

τοσοῦτοι καὶ τοιοῦτοι τάπητες.

The island is barren, it is difficult to live in so unproductive a land.

ἐρήμη ἢ νήσος, ὥστε ἐν τοιαύτῃ γῆ οὐ ῥάδιον ζῆν.

§ 25. Relative and Interrogative.

The learner is puzzled at first often by the English word what, owing to its being both relative [= 'that which'], and interrogative [= 'what?'].

The best rule is to stop and think whether the sentence remains the same in meaning after substituting 'that which' for 'what.' If so, a Relative is required. Otherwise it will be an Interrogative. [Sometimes either will make sense, and then it clearly does not matter.]

(1.) Interrogative.

I investigated what was going on.

ἑσκόπουν τί γίγνεται.

No one could tell me what was the cause.

οὐδεὶς ἤδει τί εἶν τὸ αἴτιον.

(2.) Relative.

He laughed at what I had done.

κατεγέλα δὲν ἔδρασα.

What he did yesterday delights all.

πάντες ἠδονται ἐφ' οἷς ἐχθές ἐποίησεν.

The cause of what happens.

τὸ αἴτιον τοῦ γιγνομένου.

ἡ πρόσοδος τῶν πεπραμένων.

When the Gender, Case, Mood, etc., of one word of a sentence is altered from what it would naturally be to suit the Gender, Case, Mood, etc., of some other word or words, such alteration is said to be due to attraction.

There are many forms of attraction in Greek, the commonest being the attraction of the Relative.

§ 27. Relative Attracted.

(1.) When the antecedent is in the Genitive or Dative, and the Relative would naturally be in Accusative, Attraction often takes place, i.e. the Relative may be put into the same case as the Antecedent.

None of the friends I have.

οὐδεὶς τῶν φίλων ὄν ἔχω (for οὗς).

I am pleased with the horse I keep.

ἐμμένω οἷς ὅμοσα.

I thank you for what you promised.

χάριν ἔχω σοι ὄν ὑπέσχεο.

When the Subject is a Pronoun (this, that, etc.), and the Predicate a Substantive, the Subject is commonly attracted in Greek into the gender of the Predicate. Thus in English, if we were to say, 'this is a stone,' we should have no difficulty, as there are no genders concerned; but in translating into Greek we should perhaps at first be disposed to put 'this' neuter, meaning 'this thing.' The Greek idiom, however, is to make the gender of 'this' agree by attraction with the gender of 'stone.' Examples:—

This is a stone.
οὗτός ἐστι λίθος.

That was a dire calamity.
ἐκείνη ἦν δεινὴ συμφορά.

τίς ἐστὶν αὕτη ἡ νόσος.

§ 29. Use of ἕκαστος and ἐκάτερος.

The Distributive Pronouns ἐκάτερος and ἕκαστος have a special usage which arises from the nature of the word. A Plural Nominative is, so to speak, distributed into its component parts, and thus grammatically ἕκαστος appears in apposition with a plural. And as in Latin suus and quisque have a tendency to be close together, so in Greek ἕκαστος and ἑαυτοῦ. Thus:—

ἦλθον εἰς τὸν ἑαυτοῦ ἕκαστος οἶκον.

The women were doing each their own work.
αἱ γυναῖκες τὸ αὐτῆς ἐκάστη ἔργον εἰργάζοντο.

If the sentence is of any length (or even sometimes in short sentences), the Verb is singular to agree with ἕκαστος.

§ 30. Use of Neuter Adjective.

Just as in the case of the Article we have seen that the Adjective is used with Article in the neuter, where in English generally some Substantive is employed, so frequently the Adjective (or Pronoun) is used in the neuter (whether with or without Article), where in English Substantives are required. δεινὰ ἔπαθε.

§ 31. Predicative Adjective.

We have seen that if the Adjective has not the Article and the Substantive has, the Adjective is used with a predicative meaning, as—

The man is bad.

κακὸς ὁ ἀνὴρ.

μεγάλην τὴν οἰκίαν ἔχεις.

Great was the enthusiasm with which we followed him.

πολλῇ τῇ προθυμίᾳ συνειπόμεθα αὐτῷ.

Splendid was the city he ruled.

ἰσχυρᾶς τῆς πόλεως ἦρχε.

So where in English the predicative form is not used : often in speaking of qualities or parts of the body :—

He had large ears.

μεγάλα εἶχε τὰ ὦτα.

I have a tough temper.

τραχεῖαν ἔχω τὴν ὀργήν.

He looked with unflinching eyes.

ὀρθοῖς τοῖς ὄμμασιν ἔβλεψε.

Raising his voice he spoke.

μεγάλη τῇ φωνῇ εἶπε.

Composing his face to a solemn look.

σεμνὴν διαθεῖς τὴν ὄψιν.

In English we say, 'It is evident that you are ill;' 'that-you-are-ill' being logically the subject of the verb 'is-evident.' In Greek, however, the person is made the subject, and the sentence becomes 'You are evident being ill,' or δηλος εἶ νοσῶν. In the following examples the English is purposely varied :—

φημί σε ἀγαθὸν εἶναι.

I say that I am good.

φημί ἀγαθὸς εἶναι.

So with Participles :—

I know that you are good.

οἶδά σε ἀγαθὸν ὄντα.

I know that I am good.

οἶδα ἀγαθὸς ὄν.

Genitive Case.

To understand fully all the uses of the Genitive case requires a long and difficult study, which it would be out of place to pursue here, but the learner may be helped even in the early stages by noticing the main usages.

(a.) Genitive of aim.

To shoot at a mark.

τοξεύειν σκοποῦ.

(So στοχάζομαι, ἐφίεσθαι, etc.)

Go home-wards.

ἐπ' οἴκου ἵεναι.

On this principle most verbs of aiming at, feeling after, desiring, perceiving (taste, smell, touch, listen to), etc., have the Genitive.

Such also is the special use of τοῦ μὴ to express the object of a verb or act :—

They ran, with the aim of not being caught.
ἀπέδραμον τοῦ μὴ ἀλῶναι.

(b.) Connected with this is the Genitive of respect or reference, a large class: the English uses corresponding are very various, being rendered by the prepositions ‘in regard to,’ ‘in respect of,’ ‘for,’ ‘in,’ and very commonly ‘of.’ It describes the point in which the Verb or Adjective employed is applicable.

Skilled in the art.
ἐπιστήμων τῆς τέχνης.

Enviably for wisdom.
ζηλωτὸς τῆς σοφίας.

So with many words describing ‘emptiness’ or ‘fulness,’ as πένεσθαι, πλουτεῖν, πληρῆς, κενός, δεῖ, ἐνδεής, δεῖσθαι, πίμπλασθαι, γέμειν, etc.

So special idioms, like

Having broken his head.
κατεαγὼς τῆς κεφαλῆς.
[lit. being broken in respect of . . .]

So also after many words which in English are transitive, and take Accusative, but in Greek are intransitive, and take Genitive to describe the thing or respect in which the Verb applies.

Such words are φείδομαι (spare), κρατεῖν (govern), ἔχασθαι (clasp), λανθάνομαι (forget), ἀμελεῖν (neglect), ἐπιμελεῖσθαι (manage).

The Adjectives and Substantives corresponding to such words will naturally govern the same case.

Neglect of this.

ἀμέλεια τούτου.

To have care for mankind.

ἐπιμέλειαν τῶν ἀνθρώπων ἔχειν.

So Prepositions describing local relation :—

ὑπό, literally beneath of, beneath as regards, and so simply under.

ἐπί, upon.

πρός, in front of, on the side of.

διά, through, and metaphorically by means of.

ἀντί, in front of.

(c.) Connected with this again are a variety of usages expressing relations between Substantives, such as are in Latin already familiar as rendered by Genitive, and in English are given mostly by 'of.'

Examples of the leading kinds under this head :—

The father of the man.

ὁ πατήρ τοῦ ἀνδρός (Possessive).

Wall of eight furlongs.

ὀκτῶ σταδίων τεῖχος (Descriptive).

The most of the soldiers.

οἱ πολλοὶ τῶν στρατιωτῶν (Partitive).

So with Verbs describing partition, as μετέχειν (share), μεταλαβεῖν (partake of), συμβάλλομαι (contribute to).

(d.) The Genitive is used after Comparatives, where we use 'than.'¹ Here it corresponds to Latin ablative. Example:—

He is better than his father.
ἀμείνων ἐστὶ τοῦ πατρός.

(e.) The Genitive is used (like the Latin ablative) to express separation or motion 'from.'

To retire from the walls.
τῶν τειχῶν ἀποχωρεῖν.

So with words meaning 'to cease from,' 'to change from,' 'to keep aloof from,' etc., ἀποστερεῖν (to deprive), ἀμαρτάνειν (to miss): and all prepositions meaning 'from,' or 'without,' or 'out of,' ἀπό, ἄνευ, δίχα, ἐκ, πρὸς (at hands of), παρά (from side of).

So also origin.

Born of a wise mother.
μητρὸς σοφῆς γεγονώς.

(f.) Of Time.—The Genitive is used to express the time within which . . .

In the night.
νυκτός.

Within three days.
τριῶν ἡμερῶν.

And after a Negative it corresponds to English for.

For twenty years I never went away.
εἰκόσιν ἐτῶν οὐδέποτε ἀπεδήμησα.

For two months I earned nothing.
δυοῖν μηνοῖν οὐδένα μισθὸν ἔλαβον.

So Once a year (really partitive).
ἅπαξ τοῦ ἐνιαυτοῦ.

¹ The Greeks also use 'than,' the particle ἤ: and then (as with Latin quam) the case of the second word is not affected. Thus 'he is better than his father,' ἀμείνων ἐστὶν ἢ ὁ πατήρ.

(g.) With a Participle, as Genitive absolute.

While the sun was setting.

δύοντος τοῦ ἡλίου.

As they had not come.

τούτων οὐκ ἀφικομένων.

If no one aids.

μηδενὸς ἐπαρκούντος.

(h.) Of Price.

How much is this sold for ?

πόσου τάδε πωλεῖται ;

I have not the wherewithal to buy it.

οὐκ ἔχω οὐδ' ὠνήσομαι.

These are the main heads : but the details of the special usages of the Genitive, what Verbs and Prepositions govern it, must be learnt by slowly gathered experience.

§ 36.

Accusative.

(a.) The common use, as the object of Transitive Verbs.I killed him.

ἐκτεῖνα αὐτόν.

This is so familiar from Latin and other languages that no more need be said. So Prepositions of motion to, πρὸς, ἐς, παρὰ (to beside), ἐπὶ (like English 'on to'), ὑπὸ (to under).

(b.) To express extent of space or time (like Latin).I was ill for three days.

τρεῖς ἡμέρας ἐνόσουν.

It is five furlongs off.

πέντε σταδίου ἀπέχει.

So, Prepositions which have notion of movement along :— παρὰ, alongside of, and metaphorically aside of, contrary to.
κατὰ, down along, and metaphorically according to, opposite to.
ἀνά, up along, and metaphorically according to.
περὶ, round along, and metaphorically concerned with.

(c.) Cognate (like Latin).

He went his own way.

τὴν ἑαυτοῦ ὁδὸν ἀπῆλθε.

So, without substantive :—

He sinned many sins.

πολλὰ ἥμαρτε.

He inflicted no injury on me.

οὐδὲν ἐμὲ ἤδίκηε.

(d.) Respect (also like Latin).

I have a headache.

ἀλγῶ τὴν κεφαλὴν.

Royal in race.

βασιλικὸς τὸ γένος.

Superior to Corinth in size.

κρείσσων τῆς Κορίνθου τὸ μέγεθος.

It will be observed with regard to this last usage that the Dative is used in a very similar way; and in many cases either would do to express the sense equally well.

§ 37.

Dative.

(a.) Time : 'at,' or 'on.'

On that night.

ἐκείνῃ τῇ νυκτὶ.

On the next day.

τῇ ὑστεραίᾳ.

In the former year.

τῷ προτέρῳ ἔνιαυτῷ.

To-morrow.

τῷ αὐρίῳ.

Somewhat similar are ἐν τούτῳ, ἐν ᾧ, meanwhile, whilst.

(b.) After ordinary Verbs, of person or things affected, like English 'to,' and Latin Dative.

I give it to him.

δίδωμι αὐτῷ.

He was slave to the king.

τῷ βασιλεὶ ἐδούλευε.

Also (like Genitive) with Verbs which in English are transitive, where in Greek the Dative describes the person affected.

I aided you.

ἐπήρκεσα ὑμῖν (so ἀμύνειν, βοηθεῖν).

We served him.

ὑπηρετοῦμεν αὐτῷ.

(c.) Ethic: of person affected, where, however, the sentence is grammatically complete without it.

Climb the ladder I pray.

ἀνάβαινέ μοι τὴν κλίμακα.

Who of your friends is dead?

τίς τέθνηκέ σοι;

This usage also familiar in Latin.

(d.) Of the instrument, after any Verb or Adjective.

He strikes me with his hand.

παίει με τῇ χειρὶ.

He frightened him with his insolence.

ἐξέπληξεν αὐτὸν τῇ ὕβρει.

He died of hunger.

λιμῷ ἀπώλετο.

Stiff with cold.

ψύχει στερρός.

Hot with anger.

ὀργῇ θερμὸς.

Demoralised by wealth.

πλούτῳ μαλακισθεὶς.

(e.) Of the manner.

He found it in a strange way.

θαυμασίῳ τρόπῳ ἐξεῦρε.

He helped me with great zeal.

πολλῇ προθυμίᾳ ἐβοήθει μοι.

How do you do this?

ποιῶ δὴ τρόπῳ τοῦτο ποιεῖς;

(f.) Often of the 'point in which,' or 'respect.'

Inferior in strength.

φαῦλος τῇ δυνάμει.

A man, Snooks by name.

ἀνὴρ ὀνόματι Σνωξ.

So ἔργῳ, λόγῳ, γνώμῳ, ἰσχυί, προφάσει, etc.

(g.) So again, as in Latin and English, of nearness and likeness, etc., after such words as ὅμοιος, ἔοικε, εἰκάξω, ὁ αὐτός, παραπλήσιος, ἐναντίος, ἐγγύς, προσῆκει, πρέπει, ἐπιτήδειος, σύμφωνος, etc.

On this principle the Dative follows words like—I am present (πάρεμι), I live with (παροικῶ), and prepositions describing proximity of various kinds.

ἐπί, on top of, and metaph. on condition of, with view to, in addition to.

πρός, near to, and metaph. in addition to.

ὑπέρ, above (rare : usually genitive).

ὑπό, under (but often genitive).

σύν, with (always dative).

§ 38. Case after Verb 'to be,' or Passive.

After Passives or Verbs 'to be,' 'to become,' 'to appear,' the construction of the person is continued unbroken; i.e. Adjectives or Predicate Substantives are in the same case as the foregoing Substantive or Pronoun. This construction is familiar from Latin. The rule given, § 34, about the Nominative, is clearly only a special case of this—

The man was good.

ὁ ἀνὴρ ἦν ἀγαθός.

They were said to be women.

γυναῖκες ἐλέγοντο εἶναι.

It is open to me to become a king.

ἔξεστί μοι βασιλεῖ γενέσθαι.

I said he was called Athenian.

τοῦτον ἔφην Ἀθηναῖον καλεῖσθαι.

By those who seemed to be friends.

ὑπὸ τῶν δοκούντων φίλων εἶναι.

These things being ready.

τούτων ἐτοίμων ὄντων.

In many cases the Accusative-Infinitive construction is substituted. Thus you can say—

I ask you to be ready.

δεόμαί σου προθύμου εἶναι, ἢ πρόθυμον εἶναι.

It seemed best to take up our arms and go.

ἔδοξεν ἡμῖν τὰ ὄπλα λαβοῦσιν ἀπιέναι, ἢ λαβόντας.

USE OF INFINITIVE.

§ 39.

(1.) Prolate.

Besides the prolate use of the Infinitive, which is common in all languages, e.g. after Verbs like ‘I wish,’ ‘I learn,’ ‘I can,’ ‘I purpose,’ and Adjectives like ‘able,’ ‘easy,’ ‘eager,’ there are other uses of the Infinitive in Greek not corresponding to the English idiom. A few of the chief examples are given below.

Prolate, but where English idiom is different.

Capable of ruling.	He had a custom of going.
ικανὸς ἄρχειν.	ἔθος ἦν τοῦτω ἰέναι.
Clever at carrying.	I am in hopes of going.
δεινὸς φέρειν.	ἐν ἐλπίδι εἰμι ἰέναι.

§ 40. (2.) Accusative and Nominative with the Infinitive.

After Verbs of saying and thinking, 'that' in English is often translated literally into Greek by ὅτι; but often also the idiom of the Accusative and Infinitive is employed as in Latin; the learner will be already familiar with it.

He said that it was ready.
ἔτοιμον εἶναι ἔφη.

Only observe, if the subject of the Infinitive Verb is the same as the subject of the principal Verb, it is Nominative, not Accusative.

He said she was beautiful, but he was ugly.
ἐκείνην μὲν καλὴν ἔφη εἶναι, αὐτὸς δὲ αἰσχρὸς.

NOTE.—After Verbs of feeling and knowing, a Participle is used instead of Infinitive. See § 51 and § 34 above.

§ 41. (3.) Infinitive and Article.

The Article is used with the Infinitive, where we use an abstract-substantive or a periphrasis. It has been all explained above on the Article, § 8.

§ 42. Idioms with Infinitive.

There are certain special uses of verbs with the Infinitive which have to be learnt, as they could not be inferred from English, or from general principles of grammar. For example :—

I know how to do it.

ἐπίσταμαι δρᾶν.

[Compare Participial use :—

I know I am doing.

ἐπίσταμαι δρῶν.]

I appear to do it.

φαίνομαι δρᾶν.

[Compare Participial use :—

I am proved to be doing it.

φαίνομαι δρῶν.]

I promise to do it.

ὑποσχεῖσθαι δρᾶν, ἢ δρᾶσειν, ἢ δρᾶσαι.

I am about to do it.

μέλλω δρᾶν, ἢ δρᾶσειν, ἢ δρᾶσαι.

I hope to do it.

ἐλπίζω δρᾶν, ἢ δρᾶσειν, ἢ δρᾶσαι.

PARTICIPLE.

§ 43. The Participle is used much more in Greek than in modern English, and, though the uses of it are easy and natural, even the simplest narrative is so improved by properly employing it, that the point deserves careful attention.

We should first notice some special uses of the Participle with other verbs, where the Greek idiom differs from the English.

- τυγχάνω. He chanced to come.
 ἔτυχεν ἐλθών.
- ἡδομαι. I take delight in doing.
 ἡδομαι ποιῶν.
- χαίρω. I should be pleased to get.
 χαίροιμι ἂν λαβών.
- παύομαι. He ceased to run.
 ἐπαύσατο τρέχων.
- λανθάνω. I came without their knowing.
 ἔλαθον αὐτοὺς ἐλθών.
He did it without knowing.
 ἔλαθεν ἑαυτὸν δράσας.
- φθάνω. He seized him in time before he could jump down.
 συλλαβὼν ἔφθασε πρὶν καταπηδᾶν.
He arrived in time before the surrender.
 ἀφικόμενος ἔφθασε πρὶν προδοθῆναι τὴν πόλιν.

The ordinary idiomatic uses include a variety of clauses, where the Participle has very different effects upon the meaning; sometimes it gives a relation of time, sometimes of cause, sometimes of instrument, and so forth.

The case of the Participle naturally varies. Sometimes it agrees with the Substantive which is the subject or object of the sentence; sometimes, where the subject is changed, it will naturally be in the Genitive Absolute. The learner will be familiar with this principle from Latin, where the ablative is so used absolute; or if not, the examples will make it quite clear.

a. Temporal.

(1.) Where two or more actions are related, and in English Principal Verbs are used, and the verbs are connected by 'and.'

He came and spoke.

ἔλθὼν ἔλεξε.

I stayed behind and worked.

ὑπομένων ἐπόνουν.

He asked her to take it and break it.

ἤτησε λαβοῦσαν διαρρηῆσαι.

So Genitive Absolute, with subject changed :—

They were present and saw it, and he was tortured.

παρόντων ἐκείνων καὶ ὄρώντων ἐβασανίζετο.

(2.) Where in English Participles are employed, but often with prepositions, as on, after, in, or conjunctions, as while, when, the tense is determined by the sense ; see Tenses.

I saw him in passing.

παριῶν εἶδον.

When working I am happy.

ἐν ἔργῳ ὧν εὖ ἔχω, ἢ ἡδομαι.

While wandering he fell in with me.

ἀλώμενος περιέτυχέ μοι.

On hearing this she fell down.

τοῦτο ἀκούσασα κατέπεσε.

After waiting some time, I ran off.

χρόνον τινὰ ἐπισχῶν ἀπέδραμον.

So Genitive Absolute, with new subject :—

On their assenting he swore.

συναίνεσάντων ἐκείνων ὤμοσε.

He marched with his soldiers following.

ἐπομένων τῶν στρατιωτῶν ἐπορεύετο.

(3.) Where in English Subordinate Verbs are used with conjunctions, as when, while, as,

As he saw it he was pleased.

ἰδὼν ἦσθη.

He was at a loss when he heard.

ἀκούσας ἠπόρει.

When three days had elapsed they came back.

τριῶν ἡμερῶν γενομένων ἦκον.

When night arrived.

νυκτὸς ἐπιγενομένης.

He departed while it was still night.

ἀπῆγει νυκτὸς ἔτι οὐσσης.

(4.) Where in English Abstract Substantives are used with Prepositions.

He waited in the hope.	In great alarm she cried out.
ἐπιζων περιέμενε.	ἡ δὲ μέγα φοβουμένη ἐβόησε.
At the sight she fled.	We watch you at work.
ἰδοῦσα ἔφυγε.	πυροῦντα θεωροῦμέν σε.

On their departure she died. ἀποθόντων ἐκείνων ἐτελεύτησε.
Amid the silence of all he departed. σιγόντων ἀπάντων ἀπῆει.

§ 45. b. Instrumental.

In English a variety of ways adopted to express it, the commonest being a Participle, with the Preposition by, through.

He did it by employing. ἐποίησε χρῶμενος.

§ 46. c. Comparative.

The Comparison is commonly made in English by a clause with a Subordinate Verb, the clause being introduced by as, as if, as though. In Greek, ὡς or ὡςπερ would be used with Participle.

He descended as if to retire. κατέβη ὡς ἀποχωρήσων.
He staggered as if he were drunk. ὡς μεθύων ὀλίγου κατέπεσε.

So Genitive Absolute, with change of subject :—

He ran as though a lion were after him. ὡςπερ λέοντος διώκοντος ἀπέδραμε.

§ 47. Causal (often with ὡς, ἄτε).

I will go with you, as I want to see.

συνέψομαί σοι, ὡς ἰδεῖν βουλόμενος.

He was afraid, as he knew he was guilty.

ἐφοβείτο, ὡς ξυνειδῶς ἑαυτῷ, etc.

Come, for I am ready to receive you.

ἔλθέ, ὡς ἐμοῦ θέλοντος δέξασθαι.

As he stood near I moved away.

τοῦ δὲ παριστάτος, ἐγὼ ἀπυχόμεν.

In English, often a variety of expressions may be turned with ὡς and the causal participle, such as alleging, on the understanding that, on the plea that, imagining that.

I will retire on the plea that you hate me.

ἀποχωρήσω ὡς σοῦ μισούντος ἐμέ.

They came on the understanding that no one would see them.

ἦλθον ὡς οὐδενὸς ὄψομένου.

They asked to be forgiven, alleging ignorance.

ξυγγνώμην ἤτησαν ὡς ἀγνοούντες.

§ 48. Final (often ὡς).

The Future Participle is used in Greek to express purpose, often with ὡς, sometimes with the Article.

He sent a soldier to inquire.

ἑρωτήσοντα ἀπέπεμψε στρατιώτην.

They started to overtake him.

ἀπεχώρησαν ὡς καταληψόμενοι.

I shall send messengers to inform you.

πέμψω τοὺς ἀγγελοῦντας.

§ 49. Conditional Use.

Often the Participial Clause stands for a supposition : the Participle often being followed not unnaturally by the enclitic γε, which means 'at least.'

If you go away, you will find. If he is here, I shall rescue him.
ἀπιὼν εὐρήσεις. σώσω αὐτὸν παρόντα γε.

So Genitive Absolute, with changed subject:—

If you help me, I can accomplish it.
σοῦ γε ἐπαρκούντος οἴός τ' εἶμι δρᾶν.

N.B.—In this use the Negative is μή.

If you are not present, I shall be helpless.
σοῦ μὴ παρόντος ἀμήχανος ἔσομαι.

If I do not do it, I shall be put to death.
μὴ δρᾶν ἀποθανοῦμαι.

§ 50. Concessive Use.

Where in English we use 'though' and a verb, in Greek often the Participle and καίπερ, 'even,' is used, referring to a noun or pronoun already in the sentence, with no alteration of the case.

Though old, he ran.
καίπερ γέροντων ἂν ἔτρεχε.

He killed her, though she was his mother.
ἔκτειλεν αὐτήν καίπερ μητέρα οὔσαν.

Though they were strong, he gave them orders.
ἐπέτασεν αὐτοῖς καίπερ ἰσχυροῖς οὔσιν.

Though many were present, he bathed.
καίπερ πολλῶν παρόντων ἐλούετο.

§ 51. Observe also that a Participle is used for the dependent clause after verbs of knowing and feeling (just as Infinitives are used for dependent clauses after verbs of saying and thinking). See § 40.

I know that she is present.

ἐπίσταμαι αὐτὴν παροῦσαν.

Do you not perceive it is disgraceful?

οὐκ αἰσθάνει αἰσχρὸν ὄν;

And the same rule holds here too, that the Nominative is used and not the Accusative, where the subject of the two clauses is the same.

She knew that she would die.

θανομένη ᾔδη.

I perceive I am ill.

νοσῶν αἰσθάνομαι.

They discovered they were deceived.

ἔγνωσαν ἡπατημένοι.

§ 52. Participle omitted in English.

The Participle (especially ὄν, being) is sometimes required in Greek where in English it is omitted altogether. This is chiefly in appositions, or where an attributive or descriptive sentence is added to a Substantive, as is often done in English without any Participle or Verb. The examples will make this more clear.

There was an Aethiop, cruel in disposition.

Αἰθίοψ ἦν τις ὠμὸς ὄν τὴν διάνοιαν.

Socrates, once my friend, lately died.

Σωκράτης, πάλαι ποτὲ ὄν μοι φίλος, νεωστὶ ἐτελεύτησεν.

I met my father without his coat.

τὸν πατέρα εἶδον ἄνευ τοῦ ἱματίου ὄντα.

The Chians, men always without faith, revolted.

ἀπέστησαν οἱ Χῖοι, ἄνθρωποι ὄντες ἀεὶ ἄπιστοι.

Together we are strong : separate, weak.

συνελεγμένοι μὲν ἰσχυροὶ ἔσμεν, καθ' ἕκαστον δὲ γενόμενοι, ἀσθενεῖς.

[In many cases of apposition the clause can be turned in Greek either with Article or with Participle, as—

The lion, the father of the cubs . . .

ὁ λέων, ὁ πατήρ τῶν σκύμων, ὁ πατήρ ὢν.

The Getae, the remotest of savages . . .

οἱ Γέται, οἱ ἔσχατοι τῶν βαρβάρων, ὁ ἔσχατοι ὄντες.]

§ 53. Relative and Participle.

There is a little point with reference to the use of Relative and Participle which needs clearing up, as confusing rules are sometimes given about it. Compare these two sentences :—

(1.) I met a Boeotian and a Megarian : the Boeotian, who was ill, could scarcely walk.

(2.) Two Boeotians I met, a healthy man and an invalid : the Boeotian who was ill could scarcely walk.

In (1) the relative clause who was ill is part of what is told about the Boeotian, i.e. practically part of the predicate.

In (2) the relative clause is part of the attribute, i.e. belongs to the subject.

Accordingly in Greek the two sentences become—

(1.) Βοιωτῷ τινὶ καὶ Μεγαρεῖ ἐνέτυχον· ὁ δὲ Βοιωτὸς, νόσον ἔχων, μόλις ἐδύνατο βαδίξειν.

(2.) Βοιωτοῖν δυοῖν ἐνέτυχον, τῷ μὲν εὖ ἔχοντι τῷ δὲ ἐτέρῳ νοσοῦντι· ὁ δὲ Βοιωτὸς ὁ νόσον ἔχων μόλις ἐδύνατο βαδίξειν.

TENSE IDIOMS.

§ 54. There are tenses in Greek corresponding to most (though not all) of the English tenses, and in the Grammars, from which we first learn Greek, the corresponding English tenses are given as equivalents for the Greek tenses. But as in several points the idiom or usage differs, the learner is often misled by such translations in the Grammar. It is necessary, therefore, to consider these idiomatic usages in detail; and as we are here proceeding from English to Greek, the clearest method seems to be to take the English tenses in order, and see what becomes of them in Greek.

English Present Indicative.

We have here two tenses, e.g. 'I learn,' and 'I am learning,' the former being an act (either single or repeated), and the latter a process or extended act.

Both are usually represented by the Greek Present Indicative.

Note, however, that sometimes when the act spoken of is just over, English uses the Present when Greek prefers the Aorist. Thus we often find—

You speak well (speech being over).

καλῶς εἰπας.

Do you ask me that? (question already asked.)

πότερον ταῦτα ἤρουν;

§ 55. English Imperfect.

This is the same in Greek as in English.

I was learning.

ἐμάνθανον.

Note, however, that the English Imperfect is sometimes due to oratio obliqua; the tense being really Present if the statement or question were put directly instead of indirectly. In this case the Greek does not change the tense from what it would be in oratio recta. Thus:—

He said that he was sick.

(What he said was, 'I am sick.')

ἔλεξεν ὅτι νοσῶ.¹

I asked why he was sick.

(What I asked was, 'Why are you sick?')

§ 56. English Perfect.

Greeks use Perfect much less and Aorist much more than we do: the Perfect in English therefore often corresponds to the Aorist in Greek, chiefly when there is no emphasis on the effect still lasting. Thus:—

Look at the book I have bought.

ἴδον τὸ βιβλίον ὅπερ ἐωνησάμην.

I approve what you have said.

ἐπαινῶ ὅσα εἶπας.

We have found it useful.

ὠφέλιμον εὑρομεν.

¹ Or, by strict oratio obliqua sequence, νοσῶ: but the tense (which is all we are concerned with) is still Present.

(2.) The English use Perfect sometimes where Greeks use Present; namely, when describing a past state extending up to the present.

For ten years I have been ill.

δέκα ἔτη νοσῶ.

We have been long looking for you.

πάλαι σε ζητοῦμεν.

All this time he has been cheating me.

τοσοῦτον χρόνον ἔξαπατᾷ με.

English Pluperfect.

In speaking of past things (telling stories, narrating history, etc.), the Pluperfect is often required in English to describe the events of a point of time still further back than the one with which the sentence is chiefly concerned. In Greek, the common idiom is far less precise in the matter of time; both events being past, both are commonly Aorist or Imperfect. A few illustrations will show this.

It did not at all turn out as he had expected.

(Expectation previous to event.)

οὐχ ὡς προσεδέχετο οὐδαμῶς ἀπέβη.

When the ships he had ordered arrived, he set sail.

(Order previous to arrival and sailing).

ἀφικομένων τῶν νεῶν ἃς μετεπέμψατο, εὐθὺς ἀνήγατο.

He explained it all. For the friend had come.

(Coming previous to explanation.)

ἔδηλωσε τὸ πᾶν. ἦλθε γὰρ ὁ φίλος.

He met a man who formerly had been his friend (previous to meeting).

ἀνδρὶ περιέτυχέ τινα ὃς πρότερον φίλος ἦν ἑαυτῷ.

So constantly after ἐπεὶ, ἐπειδή, when, after that, the Aorist is used where we use Pluperfect.

When he had finished.

ἐπεὶ ἐξετέλεσε.

After he had gone away.

ἐπειδὴ ἀπῆλθε.

☞ So again the English Pluperfect is often due to oratio obliqua (see § 55): and it stands for a Perfect in oratio recta; the Greek tense will therefore still in many cases (§ 56) be Aorist, since oratio obliqua does not in Greek alter tenses.

Thus, turning the clauses in § 56 into the oblique:—

He asked me to look at the book he HAD bought.

ἤτησέ με τὸ βιβλίον σκοπεῖν ὅπερ ἔωνήσατο.

He said he approved what I HAD said.

ἐπαινεῖν ἔφη ὅσα ἔλεξα.

I told him we HAD found it useful.

ἔλεξα ὅτι ὠφέλιμον εὔρομεν.

§ 58. English Past or Preterite and the Greek Imperfect and Aorist.

The English Past Tense corresponds commonly to the Greek Aorist, and then there is no difficulty; but also sometimes it is used where in Greek the Imperfect would be more natural. It is easy to turn the Tenses correctly if we remember that the Aorist in Greek expresses the Act, the Imperfect the Process or the Habit. Not unfrequently either will do, as the act may be regarded, on the one hand, merely as an act without reference to its duration, or, on the other, stress may be laid on its taking time.

	Aorist.
Having said this he went away.	ταῦτα εἰπὼν ἀπεχώρησε.
I came, I saw, I conquered.	ἦλθον, εἶδον, ἐνίκησα.
	Imperfect.
Inegotiated with the Athenians while he conversed thus.	ἔπρασσον πρὸς τοὺς Ἀθηναίους ἕως τοιαῦτα διελέγετο.
I went to sophists to learn philosophy.	παρὰ σοφιστὰς ἐφοίτων ἵνα φιλοσοφίαν μάθοιμι.
He paid me every week my salary.	δι' ἑπτὰ ἡμερῶν ἀπεδίδου μοι τὸν μισθόν.

§ 59. Special Use of Greek Imperfect.

The Imperfect in Greek, describing the protracted or extended process in the past, is often also used for a commenced or attempted action, and so may correspond to a variety of English expressions, some of which are given here.

He was by way of denying.	He proceeded to explain. ἀπηνεῖτρο.	διηγείτο.

He was ready to give (or offered).
ἔδιδου.

§ 60. Aorist Ingressive.

The Aorist is used sometimes to describe not merely the Act as opposed to the State, but the act as an entrance into the state. Thus compare the two Verbs contrasted in the following pairs :—

He was ill.	ἐνόσει.	}
He fell ill.	ἐνόσησε.	}
He was afraid.	ἐφοβείτο.	}
He became alarmed.	ἐφοβήθη.	}
He was prosperous.	εὐτύχει.	}
He rose to prosperity.	εὐτύχησε.	}

§ 61. English Present Infinitive and Greek Aorist Infinitive.

A common mistake is made by beginners in supposing the Aorist Infinitive to describe a past action. This is only so where the Infinitive is in oblique statement (oratio obliqua), and stands for a Finite Verb.

Thus, he said that he came (or had come) is ἔφη ἐλθεῖν.

But in sentences like I wish to know, able to conquer, so as to find, it is quite as good Greek to use Aorist as Present, and we might naturally say βούλομαι γνῶναι, δυνατὸς νικῆσαι, ὥστε εὐρεῖν, no less than γιγνώσκειν, νικᾶν, and εὐρίσκειν.

SPECIAL IDIOM.

After ὑποχνεῖσθαι, to promise, ἐλπίζω, to hope, μέλλω, to be going, the Future Infinitive is often used in Greek. See § 42.

§ 62. Greek Aorist in Imperative, Subjunctive, and Optative.

In all these three Moods the Greeks have two tenses corresponding to the English one. Thus :—

Learn this.	μάνθανε τοῦτο. μάθε τοῦτο.	} Imper.
In order that I may learn.	ἵνα μανθάνω. ἵνα μάθω.	} Subj.
In order that I might learn.	ἵνα μανθάνοιμι. ἵνα μάθοιμι.	} Opt.

The distinction between the Present and Aorist in each of these pairs is a very fine one (Aorist, expressing the act; Present, extended act or process), and as it is not observed in English it need not be attended to in the early stages of composition.

But the learner should get into the habit of remembering the existence of the Aorists when he has such clauses to translate, and using them as well as the Present.

The Aorist in the Participle and Infinitive is for practical convenience treated separately, though the principle of the usage is the same. See § 61.

§ 63. English Present Tense Passive.

The Present Passive in English corresponds to two different Greek tenses according to circumstances, the Present and the Perfect.

(1.) Where is-done means is being done or is repeatedly done, the Present is used.

The salt is brought down in ships. ναῦσι τὸ ἄλας κατακομίζεται.

The officers are elected by show of hands. οἱ λοχαγοὶ χειροτόνουνται.

I am grieved to find. λυποῦμαι αἰσθόμενος.

(2.) Where is-done means is already done, use the Perfect.

I am beaten in the fight. τῇ μάχῃ νενίκημαι.

In the book it is written. ἐν τῇ συγγραφῇ εἴρηται.

§ 64. English Past Tense Passive.

So 'was done' in English may mean three things:—

(1.) 'Was being done' or 'was often done.' Greek Imperfect.

The salt was brought down. τὸ ἄλας κατεκομίζετο.

They were governed by kings. ὑπὸ βασιλέων ἤρχοντο.

The children were taught by the State. δημοσίᾳ ἐδιδάσκοντο οἱ παῖδες.

(2.) 'Was done,' single act: in Greek use the Aorist.

The battle was won. ἐνίκηθησαν μάχῃ.

The town was taken. εἰλώ ἡ πόλις.

(3.) 'Was already done,' 'were previously done:' in Greek use the Pluperfect.

When I got there the enemy were defeated. ἀφικόμενον ἐμοῦ ἐνενίκηντο οἱ πολέμιοι.

They did as they were told. ἔδρασαν ὥσπερ εἴρητο.

Before he left the peace was broken. πρὶν ἀπιέναι ἐκείνον διελευντο αὐτῶν σπονδαί.

§ 65. Future Passives.

There are two Future Passives in Greek :—

(1.) Aorist Future, formed from Aorist (first and second Future).

(2.) Perfect Future, formed from Perfect (paulo-post-futurum, or third Future).

The difference between them corresponds to the difference between the Perfect and Aorist ; Perfect describing the state, Aorist the act. Thus :—

I shall be abandoned.	λειφθήσομαι.	}
I shall find myself alone or bereft.	λελείψομαι.
I shall get a beating.	τυφθήσομαι.	}
I shall be black and blue.	τετύψομαι.
I shall be set free.	λυθήσομαι.	}
I shall be free.	λελύσομαι.

Often in English the simple Future is used for both, with exactly the same ambiguity that we have noticed in the Present and Past of the Passive voice. The student will, however, find no difficulty if he will always think of the sense, and ask the simple question, Does it describe the future act or the future state ?

{	If the ships go out, the treaty will be broken.	[Act] λυθήσονται αἱ σπονδαί.
	By the time you get home the treaty will be broken.	[State] λελύσονται.
{	When he dies he shall be buried.	[Act] ταφήσεται.
	Leave him here ; he will be buried among his kindred.	[State] τεθάψεται.

§ 66. English Participle Perfect = Greek Aorist and Perfect.

We should observe that in Greek there are two Participles, the Perfect and Aorist, both of which are translated usually in Grammars, etc., by the English Perfect Participle, as, e.g. δράσας and δεδρακώς: both are rendered 'having done.' The learner, therefore, needs some hints, in doing English into Greek, as to which he is to use.

The fact is, δράσας describes the mere act of doing, δεδρακώς the state of having done; and which we use will, therefore, depend on the meaning of the English. Thus:—

	Aorist.
Having shut the door, he went out.	κλείσας τὴν θύραν ἐξῆλθε.
Having been struck, he defended himself.	πληγείς ἡμίνατο.
Having prepared his plan, he marched.	παρασκευασάμενος τὸ βούλευμα ἐπορεύετο.
The girl fell wounded.	τρωθεῖσα κατέπεσεν ἡ κόρη.

But—

	Perfect.
Having been brought up softly.	μαλθακῶς τετραμμένος.
Having suffered many years much outrage.	πολλὰ ἔτη δεινότατα πεπονθώς.
Twenty years old.	εἰκόσιν ἔτη γεγονώς.
He came with his mind made up.	βεβουλευμένος ἦλθε.
We found the girl wounded.	εὔρομεν τὴν κόρην τετραμνην.

[On the same principle, always Perfect when qualities, or personal description is given.]

Inclined to drunkenness.	πρὸς μέθην τετραμμένος.
Shod in Persian slippers.	Περσικὰς ὑποδεδεμένος.

§ 67. English Participle Perfect = Greek Present.

On the other hand, the Greek Present Participle may be used where in English we should use the Past. This will follow from the same principle mentioned before, namely that in Greek the Aorist describes act simply,

Present describes act extended, or state of doing.

Therefore if we say, 'After having learnt music ten years, he was still ignorant' (the act being extended), the Participle in Greek will naturally be Present, and it will run, ἔτη δέκα μανθάνων τὴν μουσικὴν ἔτι ἡγνόει.

So in the following examples:—

Having once associated with him often, he deserted him.

πρότερον πολλάκις συγγιγνόμενος ἀπέλιπε.

After having suffered long, he expired.

πολὸν χρόνον νοσῶν ἐτελεύτησεν.

In this case, however, the Present Participle usually has some word to mark the time, like πρότερον ποτέ, πολὺν χρόνον, etc.

§ 68. English Participle Present = Greek Aorist.

Observe, that in ordinary narrative, where there are two acts, and the first is described by a Participle, the second by a Principal Verb, the first in Greek is Aorist.

In English we often use the Present Participle for this, as will be seen from the examples :—

Taking the bag, he opened it.

λαβὼν τὸν θύλακον ἀνέφξε.

Coming to him, he asked him.

ἀφικόμενος ἤτησεν αὐτόν.

If we used the Present Participle in Greek it would mean ‘while he was taking, coming,’ etc., since the Present implies an act extended in time, the Aorist an act simply. This principle being understood, the learner will soon discern those cases where either tense may be used, and those where they will more naturally be one or the other.

In the following kind of cases both will occur :—

He learning this, and being indignant, answered.

μαθὼν τοῦτο καὶ δεινὸν ποιούμενος ἀπεκρίνατο.

§ 69. Indicative and Optative with ἄν.

It is not my intention in this book to enter into the difficult syntax of the Optative, or the complications of the Conditional Sentence; but the use of ἄν with the Optative and Indicative may be readily learnt, even at an early stage, from one or two instances.

Where in English we say 'I would or should do,' in Greek is used the Optative (Present or Aorist) with the Particle ἄν, and where we say 'I would or should have done,' in Greek is used Indicative (Aorist) with ἄν.

(1.) Optative.

I would go.

ἴοιμι ἄν.

We should scarcely see.

μόλις ἄν σκεψαίμεθα.

They could not conquer.

οὐκ ἄν δύναιντο νικᾶν.

(2.) Indicative.

I should have come yesterday.

ἔχθες ἄν ἦλθον.

Who would have known it?

τίς ἄν ἔγνω;

All would have died.

ἀπέθανον ἄν πάντες.

Observe that ἄν never comes first, and never in an emphatic place.

§ 70. Subjunctive and Optative of Purpose.

ἵνα, ὥς, and ὅπως are used in Greek to express purpose. The mood is either Subjunctive or Optative, according to the tense of the principal verb; in fact the sequence varies as in Latin, only that it is a sequence of mood and not of tense.

Primary. $\left. \begin{array}{l} I \text{ come} \\ I \text{ shall come} \\ I \text{ have come} \end{array} \right\} \text{in order that I may find.}$

Historic. $\left. \begin{array}{l} I \text{ came} \\ I \text{ was coming} \\ I \text{ had come} \end{array} \right\} \text{in order that I might find.}$

$\left. \begin{array}{l} ἀφικόμην \\ ἀφικνούμην \\ ἀφίγμην \end{array} \right\} \text{ἵνα εὕρισκοιμι or εὔροιμι.}$

If there is a negative after the ἵνα or ὥς, it is μή, not οὐ.

§ 71.

ἔφη.

When a statement is quoted or related, the Greeks use either εἶπεν ὅτι, or εἶπε with Accusative Infinitive (oratio obliqua).

If the exact words are given (oratio recta), it is common to use the slightest word, namely, ἔφη, and to put one or two words of the quoted passage first, and then ἔφη. Thus:—

‘Socrates,’ I said, ‘are you there?’

ὦ Σώκρατες, ἔφην, μῶν πάρει;

And he said ‘Yes, I have been here a long while.’

ὁ δὲ Πάλαι γάρ, ἔφη, πάρειμι.

§ 72. Emphatic Position.

In English, a word in a sentence often gets emphasis by the use of the expression it is, it was, when in Greek (as in Latin) the emphasis can be quite as clearly and much more neatly given by the position of the word. Thus :—

It was yesterday I came.

ἐχθὲς ἦλθον.

It is you I have been expecting; but it is he who is come.

σὲ μὲν πάλαι προσδοκῶ· οὗτος δὲ ἦκει.

§ 73. Adverbs of Place.

One caution is required in doing Greek composition about Adverbs of Place.

In English we often use there, here, where, not only after Verbs of rest, where they are legitimate, but also after Verbs of motion, where they stand for the more correct thither, hither, whither. In Greek this license is never allowed, and the learner must be on his guard therefore.

Come here.

δεῦρο ἐλθέ (not ἐνθάδε).

He went there.

ἦει ἐκεῖσε (not ἐκεῖ).

Where are they gone?

ποῖ οἴχονται (not ποῦ);

§ 74. Interrogations.

There are a great variety of ways of asking questions in Greek, corresponding to the number of Interrogative Particles. The principal are given below.

(1.) No Particle.

Will you come forward ?

θέλεις παρελθεῖν ;

Can you help me ?

δύνασαι μοι ἐπαρκεῖν ;

(2.) οὐ, οὐκουν, ἄρ' οὐ, πῶς οὐ (the latter especially used where the question is impatient or indignant).

Shall you not fight ?

οὐ μαχεῖ ;

Are we not then come ?

οὐκουν ἀφίγμεθα ;

Is it not imprudent ?

πῶς οὐκ ἀναιδές ἐστι ;

(3.) ἄλλο τι, ἄλλο τι ἤ.

Have we not made a mistake ?

ἄλλο τι ἁμαρτάνομεν ;

Do not the dead sleep ?

ἄλλο τι ἢ οἱ τεθνηκότες καθεύδουσι ,

(4.) μῶν, μὴ, ἄρα μὴ, μῶν μὴ.

Do you think we have not said enough ?

μῶν μὴ δοκεῖ ἐνδεῶς λελέχθαι ;

Does he do you wrong ?

μῶν τί σε ἀδικεῖ ;

Do we seem to you ?

μὴ σοι δοκοῦμεν ;

(5.) πότερον (alternative questions chiefly; but often in simple questions, since they can always be put alternatively: Is it so or not?).

Shall you conquer or not?
πότερον νικήσεις αὐτόν, ἢ οὐ;
Will they dispute this?
πότερον τοῦτο ἀμφισβητήσουσι;

Of these, (2) and (3) expect answer 'yes'; in (4) answer is negative or doubtful; in (1) and (5) answer is doubtful.

I have said nothing about interrogatives like τίς, πότε, ποῦ, πῶς, etc., as there is no difficulty with these.

Dramatic Particles.

The Greek being more lively than English, dramatic particles are often inserted in Greek where in English none are used. Such particles are δή, ἄρα, and the following instances from the Exercises will illustrate the difference between the languages:—

For this I give thanks.

τούτου δὴ χάριν ἔχω.

To know what the others think.

εἰδέναι τί ἄρα οἱ ἕτεροι οἴονται.

Remained as though working.

ἔμενον ὡς ἐργαζόμενοι δὴ.

Wondering how the letter saw.

θαυμάσας πῶς ἄρα ἡ ἐπιστολὴ εἶδεν.

We are in terrible danger.

ἐν δεινῷ δὴ κινδύνῳ ἔσμεν.

We are now helpless.

ἀμήχανοι δὴ νῦν ἔσμεν.

Sometimes they stand in a lively way for a word like alleged, supposed, in English.

He brought in the supposed women.

[They were really conspirators dressed up.]

εἰσήγαγε τὰς γυναῖκας δῆ.

The supposed new cloth.

[Really nothing.]

τὸ νέον δῆ ὕφασμα.

§ 76. μέν and δέ.

When a sentence contains two clauses opposed or antithetic to each other, it is customary to mark this antithesis clearly in Greek, by putting μέν with the first and δέ with the second.

In English we do this sometimes by particles :—

. . . indeed . . . but . . . ,

or,— on the one hand . . . on the other . . . ;

sometimes with only one, or even no particle at all. Thus it is necessary for the learner to be on his guard, that he may not omit the μέν and δέ when they are required. Examples :—

I indeed am strong, but you are weak.

ἐγὼ μὲν ἰσχυρός, σὺ δὲ ἀσθενής.

καὶ πειρωμένοις μὲν κίνδυνός ἐστιν· μὴ πειρωμένοις δὲ οὐδεμία ἐλπίς.

[One omitted.]

Before he was happy, but now he is wretched.

πρότερον μὲν εὐτυχής ἦν—νῦν δὲ ἄθλιος.

[Both omitted.]

The Athenians loved poets ; the Spartans did not.

οἱ μὲν Ἀθηναῖοι ἐφίλουν τοὺς ποιητάς· οἱ δὲ Λακεδαιμόνιοι οὐ.

Negatives.

There are two Negatives, οὐ and μή, usually distinguished as οὐ negative of Statement, μή negative of Conception. The definition becomes intelligible by looking at the usage.

(1.) οὐ, Negative Statement.

Nothing happens.

οὐδὲν γίγνεται.

You must not do it.

οὐ χρή δρᾶν.

I should not come.

οὐκ ἂν ἔλθοιμι.

I know that no one saw.

οἶδα οὐδένα ἰδόντα.

Will you not go away?

οὐκ ἄπει;

I asked why it was not done.

ἠρόμην τί οὐκ ἐγένετο.

It is not possible that you are not friendly.

οὐκ ἔσθ' ὅπως οὐ φίλος εἶ.

He announced that no one was there.

οὐδένα ἠγγειλε παρόντα, οἱ παρεῖναι.

Though I had nothing I was rich.

καίπερ οὐδὲν ἔχων ἐπλούτουν.

(2.) μή, Negative Conception.

Purpose, That I might not do.

Prohibition, Don't do.

Oblique } I asked him not to do.

Petition. } I forbid to do.

I ought not to do it.

ἵνα μή δράσαιμι.

μή δρᾶ.

ἤτησα μή δρᾶν.

ἀπαγορεύω μή δρᾶν.

χρή μή δρᾶν (or by (1) οὐ χρή).

So with βούλομαι, δεῖ, ὄφελον, etc.

Generic. Those who were not there. οἱ μή παρόντες.

Dishonourable things. τὰ μή καλά.

Condition. If you are not ill. εἰ μή νοσεῖς.

You are wrong not to do this. ἀμαρτάνεις μή ποιῶν τάδε.

Most of the other uses of μή will be learnt later.

§ 78. 'Any,' 'ever,' 'as yet,' etc., after Negative.

In Greek the idiom of the Negatives differs so far from the idiom in English, that all the Indefinite words following a negative are also themselves negative. Thus:—

I never heard anything anywhere from anybody.
 οὔποτε ἤκουσα οὐδὲν οὐδαμοῦ οὐδενός.

The words thus used are chiefly the following:—

nobody	οὐδεὶς.
never	οὔποτε.
nowhere	οὐδαμοῦ.
from nowhere	οὐδαμόθεν.
to nowhere	οὐδαμόσε.
nohow	οὔπως.
not yet	οὔπω.

If μή is required in the first negative, the others will all begin with μή:—

Don't give anything to anybody.
 μὴ δίδου μηδὲν μηδενί.

So 'even' after negative becomes in Greek not even, οὐδέ.

No woman even tries.
 οὐδεμία γυνή οὐδὲ πειράται.

§ 79. 'That' in English.

For the help of the beginner, it may be useful to tabulate the various ways in which the word 'that' is used, and the corresponding Greek words or idioms.

(1.) Demonstrative (ἐκεῖνος, or sometimes οὗτος).

That man.

ἐκεῖνος ὁ ἄνθρωπος.

That is a great pleasure.

τοῦτο ἡδιστόν ἐστιν.

(2.) Relative (ὅς or ὃςπερ).

The man that I saw.

ὁ ἀνὴρ ὃν εἶδον.

The woman that came.

ἡ γυνὴ ἣπερ ἦλθεν.

(3.) Conjunction.

(a.) After verbs of saying or thinking: Accusative (or Nominative) and Infinitive, § 40.

I said that the moon was bright.

εἶπον τὴν σελήνην λαμπρὰν εἶναι.

I don't think that you will come.

οὐκ οἶμαι σὲ ἦξειν.

We think that we shall be rich.

πλούσιοι οἰόμεθα ἔσεσθαι.

- (b.) After verbs of knowing and feeling: Accusative (or Nominative) and Participle, § 51.

I know that he is here.

οἶδα αὐτὸν παρόντα.

I perceive that I am sick.

αἰσθάνομαι νοσῶν.

(Both (a) and (b) can also be done with ὄτι, only be careful about tenses, § 64.)

- (c.) After verbs of asking, etc.: Infinitive: and Accusative if subject is required.

He ordered that she should come, and the rest stay.

ἐκέλευσεν ἐλθεῖν μὲν ἐκείνην, τοὺς δὲ ἄλλους μένειν.

It is needful that you should be put to death.

ἀνάγκη ὑμᾶς ἀποθανεῖν.

- (d.) After Abstract Substantives 'the fact that:': τὸ and Accusative with Infinitive, § 8.

The fact that we are conquered.

τὸ ἡμᾶς ἠσώσθαι.

- (e.) After Demonstratives ('so,' 'such,' etc.): ὥστε.

He was so strong, that he killed her.

οὕτως ἰσχυρὸς ἦν ὥστε ἀπέκτεινεν αὐτήν.

- (f.) Expressing purpose: ἵνα, ὥς, ὅπως, § 70.

I worked that I might grow rich.

ἐπόνουν ἵνα πλουτήσῃμι.

§ 80. 'Neither, nor.'

The beginner is always puzzled with οὔτε and οὐδέ. The difference between them is this :—

When two negative clauses are on the same footing, and you start with an intention to make both denials, you then use in English Neither . . . nor, and in Greek you use οὔτε . . . οὔτε.

When, however, you begin with one negative clause standing alone, and then add another, in English you use not . . . nor, and in Greek οὐκ . . . οὐδέ.

The same is true of μήτε, μηδέ.

(1.) Neither cows nor horses.

οὔτε βόες οὔτε ἵπποι.

I will neither remain nor depart.

οὔτε μὲν ὄντι οὔτε ἀπειμι.

It is good to be neither rich nor poor.

ἄμεινον μήτε πλούσιον μήτε πένητα εἶναι.

(2.) It is not hot, nor cold.

οὐ θερμόν, οὐδέ ψυχρόν ἐστίν.

It is not just, nor indeed profitable.

οὐ δίκαιόν ἐστίν· οὐδέ μὴν λυσιτελέσ.

Do not be angry, nor curse.

μη θυμώσθε, μηδὲ καταράσθε.

EXERCISES.

We will suppose the learner to have mastered the Article δ ἡ τό and the first two Declensions, namely, the A Declension, with its five forms (all very like), say—

Masculines.		Feminines.
νεανίας κριτής		χώρα τιμή μούσα

Also the O Declension, both Simple and Contracted; for example—

Simple.		Contracted.
λόγος δῶρον		νόος—νοῦς ὄστέον—ὄστοῦν with the Attic Declension, as λεώς, ἀνώγειον.

These declensions are the first two in most Grammars; and the advantage of dividing them thus, and calling them A and O Declensions, is that the reason of the differences in termination is then so clearly seen.

With these should be learnt the Adjectives which follow these declensions, namely, for example—

σοφός, σοφή, σοφόν | ἴδιος, ἴδια, ἴδιον and the contracted forms, χρυσέος, ἀργυρέος (-οῦς).

These really add nothing to the trouble, for they simply follow the three genders of the Substantive.

Also should be learnt $\delta\varsigma$, ἦ, $\delta\grave{\iota}$, exactly like σοφός (except δ neuter), and οἶτος, ὅδε, ἐκείνος, τοσοῦτος, τοιοῦτος, and αὐτός, all very like each other.

Then we are ready to begin our first Exercises.

In order to enable the learner at once to make whole sentences, which is much less wearisome than doing meaningless fragments, the principal parts of the verb 'to be' are here given, to be used in the Exercises.

I am, εἰμί.	I was, ἦν.
Thou art, εἶ.	Thou wast, ἦσθα.
He, she, it, there—is, ἐστί.	He, she, it, there—was, ἦν.
We are, ἐσμέν.	We were, ἦμεν.
You are, ἐστέ.	You were, ἦτε.
There are, they are, εἰσὶ.	There were, they were, ἦσαν.

I shall be, ἔσομαι.

Thou wilt be, ἔσει.

He, she, it, there—will be, ἔσται.

We shall be, ἐσόμεθα.

You will be, ἔσεσθε.

There will be, they will be, ἔσονται.

To be, εἶναι.

Note.—The rarely-required Dual is omitted at present, in order to avoid needless trouble.

ἐστί and εἰσὶ are written ἐστίν and εἰσίν before a vowel or a full stop.

Occasionally throughout the Exercises a few words will be given which the learner has not yet reached in the Grammar. The sentences will thus be more varied, and so less tiresome; and it will do him no harm to become familiarised in a natural and easy way with the look of some of the commoner words.

Note.—In the vocabularies the following signs are used :—

a. accusative.

m. masculine.

d. dative.

f. feminine.

g. genitive.

n. neuter.

† denotes that the word cannot come first after a stop.

EXERCISE I.

Swans.

It is now midday, and the sun is very hot. The shade of the trees is cool, and the lake is beautiful. I see (ὄρω, acc.) many swans, which are bright and white. The neck of that¹ swan is long, but the left wing seems (δοκεῖ, with inf.) to be small.² I do not know (οἶδα, acc.) the cause of this. Perhaps there is a bad disease in this wing. Perhaps a bone of this swan was broken (δι-ερράγη) by³ a stone. There is a small boat on the lake.

This horse is mine. Before¹ he was strong, but now he is very thin and poor. And the cause of this I will tell (λέξω, acc.). Those farmers to whom I intrusted (ἐπέτρεπον, acc.) him were very faithless. They stole (ἔκλεπτον, acc.) the corn of the horse. But the device is good which I have (ἔχω, acc.), for I put (ἔθηκα, acc.) stones into the manger. The horse eating (ἔσθίων, acc.) the corn spits out (ἀποπτύει, acc.) the stones. But the farmers steal (κλέπτουσι, acc.) the corn with the stones. In this way² it is easy to find out (ἐξ-ευρεῖν, acc.) the deceit. The farmers therefore will no longer be bad. The Indians are bad persons : for they honour (τιμῶσι, acc.) liars and thieves. And there was a certain master who had (to whom there was) a golden brick : and the value of the gold was marvellous. And a certain slave of those¹ in the house stole (ἔκλεψε, acc.) the brick : but the thief was unknown to the master. But there was a wise judge in the country : and he by this device found out (ἔξεύρε, acc.) everything.

For the slaves were around him, being collected together. And there was very great fear of the judge. And he spoke (εἶπε, acc.) this word : 'The thief has (ἔχει, acc.) a feather on his² head.' And the others³ were quiet, but the thief quickly shook (ἐτίναξε, acc.) his head, and so was manifest to the slaves and to the judge.

My brother has (use ἐστὶ) a she-goat, which he found (εἶρε, acc.) in a wonderful way.¹ For there is a rock not far from the house, and in this rock a large cavern under the earth. And my brother was once in the cavern, and being weighed down (βαρυνόμενος) by sleep he lay (ἔκειτο) for² a long time quiet. But suddenly he saw (εἶδε, acc.) bright eyes through the darkness. And he was in great fear. For the wolf has such eyes,³ and the country is full of wolves. In this wood are numberless bees flying (πετόμενος) every way very-quickly. Where is the place in which the house of these is? It is probably in some one of these large trees. For often the wood is rotten, on account of the long time and the dreadful rain. And thus in the hollow [use neuter of adjective] is a cavern, which, not without trouble, has been made (πεποιήται) by the bees into (ἐς, acc.) a house. And this is wonderful, that not men are most-hateful (ἐχθιστος) to the bees, but bears. For these are like children, and they have (there is to them) a very-great desire of very-sweet things.¹

Why were all-kinds-of people faithful to Cyrus, as many as were subject to his rule? Because he himself was very faithful, and always ready to give (δοῦναι, acc.) his wealth to his companions, and gifts of which each was in-need (δέομενος, gen.), and from his friends he received in-return (ἀντελάμβανε, acc.) many things, but not so many as they from him. And sometimes the corn was scanty for the men and the fodder for the horses. And then he used-to-send (ἔπεμπε, acc.) loaves to them, and about the fodder he said (ἔφη, acc.) this: I have (use ἐστὶ) fodder, owing to the care of my slaves: I will give (δώσω) therefore to my friends: for to whom a man is dear, to him no less is his horse.

In this wood are numberless bees flying (πετόμενος) every way very-quickly. Where is the place in which the house of these is? It is probably in some one of these large trees. For often the wood is rotten, on account of the long time and the dreadful rain. And thus in the hollow [use neuter of adjective] is a cavern, which, not without trouble, has been made (πεποιήται) by the bees into (ἐς, acc.) a house. And this is wonderful, that not men are most-hateful (ἐχθιστος) to the bees, but bears. For these are like children, and they have (there is to them) a very-great desire of very-sweet things.¹

Cyrus.

VOCABULARY.

why , διὰ τί.	each , ἕκαστος.
all kinds of , παντοῖος.	friend , φίλος.
faithful , πιστός.	many , πολὺς.
Cyrus , Κῦρος.	so many , τοσοῦτος.
as many as , ὅσοι.	they , ἐκεῖνοι.
subject , ὑπήκοοι.	sometimes , ἐνίοτε.
rule , ἀρχή.	scanty , σπάνιος.
because , ὅτι.	fodder , χιλός.
himself , αὐτός.	loaf , ἄρτος.
always , ἀεί.	owing to , διὰ, α.
ready , ἔτοιμος.	care , ἐπιμέλεια.
wealth , πλοῦτος.	dear , φίλος.
gift , δῶρον.	no less , οὐχ ἥσσον

Why were all-kinds-of people faithful to Cyrus, as many as were subject to his rule? Because he himself was very faithful, and always ready to give (δοῦναι, acc.) his wealth to his companions, and gifts of which each was in-need (δεόμενος, gen.), and from his friends he received in-return (ἀντελάμβανε, acc.) many things, but not so many as they from him. And sometimes the corn was scanty for the men and the fodder for the horses. And then he used-to-send (ἔπεμπε, acc.) loaves to them, and about the fodder he said (ἔφη, acc.) this: I have (use ἐστί) fodder, owing to the care of my slaves: I will give (δώσω) therefore to my friends: for to whom a man is dear, to him no less is his horse.

injustice , ἀδικία.	peaceful , εἰρηνικός.
from (suffer), ὑπό, g.	fight , μάχη.
safety , ἀσφάλεια.

before (motion), πρὸς, α.	less , ἥσσων.

There was therefore a gathering of the sheep to council: and the wolves themselves also came (ἦλθον), nor were they hindered (ἐκωλύοντο) by them. And the sheep said these things:—‘We are¹ in terrible danger, being worried (ἀρπάζομενος) by the wolves. And this is unjust: so we wish (βουλόμεθα) to have (ἔχειν, acc.) some law, and thus to be more in safety.’ And the wolves said this to them:—‘There shall then be a law for you such-as-this: the sheep that is² wronged (ἀδικούμενος) by a wolf shall bring (ἄξει, acc.) the unjust (one) before our council, and both shall have (use εἰμί, to be) their rights from us.’ And at the time³ it was delightful to the sheep: but the injustice of the wolves became (ἐγένετο) not at all less.

Pigeons are sensible, and very clever at-carrying (inf. φέρειν, acc.) letters. This they do (ποιούσι, acc.) in a manner somewhat as follows:—The pigeon loves (φιλεῖ, acc.) its¹ home, and is shrewd: and so the way to² its home it finds (εὕρισκει, acc.) easily.

And once there was a fortress of the Mamedaioi, which was under (ἐν, dat.) siege from (ὑπό, gen.) the enemy. And about midday once a soldier of the enemy saw (εἶδε, acc.) a pigeon above in the sky flying (πετόμενος, partic.). And under its wings was something white, as if it were a letter. Thereupon there was desire to the soldiers to catch (λαβεῖν, acc.) the bird. And they³ made (ἐποιούντο, acc.) trial of their arrows: but they were not at all useful.

lack , ἔνδεια.	plenty , ἀφθονία.
preparation , παρασκευή.	provision , ἐπιτήδεια, n. pl.

And immediately there arose (ἐγένετο) a shout of the soldiers : for there was dreadful indignation at the escape of the pigeon.

And she was in fear owing to the noise, and fell (ἔπεσε) straightway into the camp. And they untied (ἔλυσαν, acc.) the letter about¹ its neck : and in this were words as follows :—

‘ O dear citizens of the Mamedaioi, why do ye feel (ἔχετε, acc.) such fear concerning the siege ? There will be no lack to you of assistance. For we are making (ποιούμεθα, acc.) a wonderful preparation. And the tyrant will bring (ἄξει, acc.) an army, and after five days we shall be close to your fortification. Therefore it is foolish to be in distress. For quickly you shall have (use verb ‘ to be ’) victory and plenty of provisions.’ Such then was the letter.

VOCABULARY.

mind , νοῦς.

And the soldiers had (use εἰμί) very-great joy at this. For the plan of the enemy was now manifest, not less than the (gen.) distress of the Mamedaioi.

Accordingly they wrote (ἔγραψαν, acc.) another letter instead of the former one. And it was as follows:—

‘O dear citizens of the Mamedaioi, we are¹ now helpless. For we are not able at all to give you (δοῦναι, dat. and acc.) aid. For the tyrant has (ἔχει, inf.) in (his) mind to make (ποιεῖσθαι, acc.) another expedition. But we are not altogether hopeless about you, for you are brave and strong for (ἔς, acc.) the war.’

And this the pigeon carried (ἔφερε, acc.) into the fortress to the Mamedaioi. And those¹ within had (εἰμί) extreme fear. And they surrendered (ἐνέδοσαν, acc.) themselves to them. And after five days appeared (ἐφάνη) the tyrant with the army: but the enemy were already within.

NOTE AFTER EXERCISE 15.

So far we have used none but the A and O Declensions, including not only the Substantives, but the Adjectives and Pronouns which are similarly declined.

We now shall add the Consonant Declensions; i.e. we shall use all Substantives, Adjectives, and Pronouns, without any restriction: and also Participles, which are similarly declined, though as the Verbs are not yet learnt, the Nominative Singular of the Participle will be given.

As to the Verbs, we shall still only assume knowledge of the parts of εἶμι, to be, given on page 66; and all other verbs required will be given in the Exercises in the part which is wanted.

The learner will thus be familiarised with some of the common terminations before definitely learning the Verbs.

In the Vocabulary henceforth we shall give the stem of the Substantives which belong to the Consonant-declension: so that the student will have no need to look the word out in grammar or dictionary, if he knows his Declensions.

Thus, supposing he wants the Genitive Singular and Dative Plural of ὄνυξ, he finds in the Vocabulary ὄνυξ (-υχ-): this teaches him that the stem is ὄνυχ-, and from that he knows that the Genitive Singular is ὄνυχος, and the Dative Plural ὄνυξι.

Obs.—Unless the contrary is stated, Nouns in -ος are masculine, like λόγος: in -α and -η, fem.: in -ον, neut. Also Nouns in -ις are feminine.

There was a wood thick with¹ all manner of trees and plants, and here was a great multitude of birds and beasts. And no one was in greater honour than (gen.) the elephant. And there was once a gathering of the other beasts, and much talk took place (ἐγένετο) about him. 'What is the cause,' they said (ἔφασαν), 'of the honour of the elephant (dat.)?' And some thought (use ἐδόκει, 'seemed,' with dative of person) one cause and some another.²

And first the speech of the fox was as follows: 'Why³ is this one better than we (are)? Not at all, I suppose (οἶμαι), on account of his tail, for he has (use ἐστὶ) a very small and ugly one.' And at the same time while speaking (λέγων, particip.) he moved (ἐκίνει, acc.) his own long and soft tail.

'You are right,'⁴ replied (ἔφασαν) the others, with much laughter and applause.

And here the ox struck in (ὑπέλαβε), saying (λέγων) : ‘I, however, recognise (γιγνώσκω, acc.) the cause : for this one has (use ‘to be’) two long teeth, projecting (προέχων, -οντ-) out of his mouth : and these seem (δοκοῦσι) to the others to be like horns : and no one of course knows (οἶδε, acc.) anything⁵ more beautiful than horns.’

And last the ass said this : ‘You are all¹ ignorant and foolish : for what honour is there to horns at least and tails ?³ Surely not so, but the fine glory is that paid to (say ‘is of’) ears. The honour therefore has come (γέγονε) to the elephant owing to his ears.’

There was a hunter, and this (man) had (use ἦν) a custom of going (inf. ἵεναι) often through the forest: for there was the hunting-ground of the lions.

And once he found (εὔρε, acc.) two cubs of a lion (being ὦν, ὄντ-) without their father.¹ And these had (use ἦν) no fear about him: but they fawned (ἔσαινον) with their tails and were friendly to him.

And this was pleasing to the hunter, and sitting on the ground he gave (ἔδωκε, acc.) some of his food to the cubs: and at the same time he ate (ἔσθιεν) with them himself² also. But the lioness, the mother¹ of the cubs, came (ἦλθεν) in the meantime, and she saw (εἶδε, acc.) the man and the cubs eating (ἔσθιων, -οντ-) together. Then no longer did she have (use ἦν) desire to seize (συλλαβεῖν, acc.) the man, but she went away (ἀπήει) and killed (ἔκτεινε, acc.) a deer, and brought (ἔφερε, acc.) it to him.

The Spirit and the Miser.

VOCABULARY.

Egyptian, Αἰγύπτιος.story, μῦθος, m.matter, πρᾶγμα (-ματ-), n.especially, οὐχ ἥκιστα.spirits, δαίμονες.power, δύναμις.below, ὑπό, g.powerful, δυνατός.king, βασιλεύς.Asia, Ἀσία.grief, λυπή.possible, οἶός τε.forbidden, ἀπόρητος.

The Egyptians have (use verb 'to be') many stories of all kinds about all matters, and especially about Spirits. For these have great care¹ for mankind, and with their power are able to perform (ἐξεργάζεσθαι, acc.) wonderful things.² And some of these stories I will tell (λέξω, acc.).

For once there was a Spirit who had (εἶμι) much gold, hidden below the earth. And it was necessary once for him to go away (ἀπελθεῖν). For there is one most powerful and greatest of the Spirits, the king³ of the rest: and it had been ordered (εἶρητο, dat.) to him by the king to go away into Asia. And then he was in great grief and distress about his gold: for it was not possible for him to take it away (ἀποφέρειν, acc.) with him.⁴ For this is always forbidden to the Spirits. How then shall the gold be in safety?

The learner has now got accustomed sufficiently to the Substantives and Adjectives and Pronouns alone, and also to the Verb 'to be:' it is time to begin working the Verbs steadily. We will begin with the Active Verb, using at first only those whose tenses are conjugated regularly, as far as regards the terminations, like the subjoined examples, and using only Present, Future, Imperfect, Strong Aorist; then adding later the Weak Aorist, the Perfect, and the Pluperfect.

PRESENT.
λύ-ω	I loose	} Singular.
λύ-εις	Thou loosest
λύ-ει	He looses
λύ-ετον	You two loose	} Dual.
λύ-ετον	They two loose
λύ-ομεν	We loose	} Plural.
λύ-ετε	Ye loose
λύ-ουσι	They loose

The Future λύσ-ω, 'I shall loose,' has exactly the same terminations as the Present.

IMPERFECT.
ἔλυ-ον	I was loosing.
ἔλυ-ες	Thou wast loosing.
ἔλυ-ε	He was loosing.
ἔλυ-ετον	You two were loosing.
ἔλυ-έτην	They two were loosing.
ἔλυ-ομεν	We	} were loosing.
ἔλυ-ετε	You
ἔλυ-ον	They

STRONG AORIST.

ἔλαβ-ον	I took.
ἔλαβ-ες	Thou tookest.
ἔλαβ-ε	He took.
ἐλάβ-ετον	You two	} took.
ἐλαβ-έτην	They two
ἐλάβ-ομεν	We	} took.
ἐλάβ-ετε	You
ἔλαβ-ον	They

Notice that all the Strong Aorists which end in -ον have exactly the same terminations as the Imperfect.

AUGMENT.

Observe that the Imperfect and Aorist have ε before them. This is called the Augment, and is the mark of a past tense.

(1.) If the Verb begin with consonant, ε is prefixed. Only Verbs beginning with ρ have ρ doubled, as ἔρ-ριπτον.

(2.) If with a Vowel the following changes take place :—

a	becomes η ,	as ἄπτω, ἦπτον .
ε	„ η ,	„ ἔθελω, ἦθελον .
ο	„ ω ,	„ ὀνομάζω, ὠνόμαζον .
αι	„ η ,	„ αἰρέω, ἦρον .
οι	„ η ,	„ οἰκτείρω, ἦκτειρον .
αυ	„ ηυ ,	„ αὐξάνω, ἠύξανον .

Other Vowels and Diphthongs not augmented.

When the Verb has a Preposition before it, the augment is inserted after the Preposition :

ἐκβάλλω, ἐξ-έβαλλον .
συλλέγω, συν-έλεγον .

good-will , εὖνοια.	go away , ἀπέρχομαι.

And in the same city where the gold was, there was also a certain man, rich and miserly. To him therefore the Spirit coming (προσελθών) by night spoke (ἔλεξε, acc.) as follows:—

And after this the Spirit went away; and after a little interval it was day: and instead of the Spirit the gold was upon the earth.

And the Spirit was away (use ἄπ-ειμι, like εἶμι) fifty years¹ in Asia : and at last he had (εἶμι) permission to return to his former city. And immediately he went to the house of the miserly man. And thus he talked (διελέγετο) to himself : 'About the man² himself nothing is certain to me : for after fifty years' interval he is perhaps dead (τέθνηκε) : but about the gold already everything is plain : for it³ at least will be in safety.'

And this was true. For there was a large strong⁴ chest, and within this was the gold, and on the top lay (ἔκειτο) the man. And in his hand were the keys of the chest. And he was a corpse. For he had died⁵ from want of food in (the midst of) so much wealth. And the Spirit found in the chest not only the former gold, but also double as much, gathered by the dead (aorist particip.) man laboriously during this time.

Ariphernes was rich, and satrap¹ of many men. And once from disease he fell (κατέστη) into great distress : and at last he died. And immediately, according to the custom of that time,² he went down (κατέβη) into Hades to Aeacus, the judge of the dead.

And Aeacus said this : ‘Where have you come (aorist) from ? and who and what kind of man are you ?’

And he said : ‘I am a Persian, Ariphernes by name : and I had a terrible disease for³ many years : and I was not capable myself of attending to (ἐπιμελεῖσθαι, gen.) my province, and the common people there :² but all such things I intrusted to assistants and slaves. But I had forethought for (gen.) my own food and drink.’

VOCABULARY.

send , πέμπω (-ψω).	mischief , κακόν.
Elysium , Ἠλύσιον.	arise , γίγνομαι (aor. ἐγενόμην).
now , δέ.	better , ἀμείνων.
Hermes , Ἑρμῆς.	law-court , δικαστήριον.
unjust , ἄδικος.	to-day , σήμερον.
lazy , ἀργός.	listen , ἀκούω, γ.

And Aeacus answered as follows: 'I will send you then to Elysium.' Now this is the place of good men. And Hermes was there, and he said,¹ 'This is unjust: for this man was methinks lazy, and not worthy of such good fortune.'

But Aeacus with much laughter answered thus: 'But, my friend, this (fellow) is a fool. And many mischiefs arise for mankind on account of the fools, but this man was better than other fools precisely² on account of his laziness: for thus less mischiefs arose to the multitude.'

To-day I was in the law-court, and was listening to the judge there: and this is clear to me about him: Aeacus will send him to Elysium.

The Damaraioi.

VOCABULARY

tell , λέγω.	out of , ἐκ, γ.
tale , λόγος, m.	first , πρῶτος.
at (time) , δ.	came forth , ἐξῆλθοι
world , γῆ, f.	second , ἕτερος.
everywhere , πανταχοῦ.	send forth , ἐκπέμπω.
bear , φέρω.	flee away , ἀποφεύγω, ἀπέφυγον,
various , παντοῖος.	σογ.
neither—nor , οὔτε—οὔτε.	ill , χαλεπῶς.
fish , ἰχθῦς.	kindle , ἄπτω, ἤπτον.
nourish , τρέφω.	dog , κύων.
name , ὀνομάζω.	remain , μένω.

The Damaraioi tell this tale: At that time at which the world was made (ἐγένετο) there was darkness everywhere: and the fields bore various trees, but neither man nor beast nor bird nor fish as yet.¹ And one tree they nourish, and name it Mother: from out of this the first man came forth. And after this a second tree sent forth all the animals. But the man bore the darkness ill, and kindled a fire. And most of the animals fled away in² great fear, but the sheep and the ox and the dog remained. So these from that time are friendly to man.

We may now add the Weak Aorist, Perfect, and Pluperfect; and the Participles in -ων and -ας and -ως.

λυ-ω makes in the Present Participle λύ-ων, -ουσα, -ον; the Future λύσ-ω makes λύσ-ων, -ουσα, -ον.

The Strong Aorist ἔ-βαλ-ον makes βαλ-ών, -ούσα, -όν.

All these three declined in the same way, except as regards Accents, to which the learner had better not attend at present.

The Weak Aorist ἔ-λυσ-α makes λύσ-ας, -ασα, -αν, -αντος, -άσης, -αντος, etc.

The Perfect λέ-λυκ-α makes λελυκ-ώς, -υῖα, -ός, -ότος, -υίας, -ότος, etc.

The Augment is always dropped in the Participle, the reduplication retained.

Obs.—In the Vocabularies henceforth a. and f. are used with Verbs to mean Aorist and Future. Thus:—

λείπω (f. λείψω, a. -λιπ-) means that the Future of λείπω is λείψω, and the Aorist Indic. is ἔ-λιπ-ον.

The Libyans.

VOCABULARY.

Libyan , Λίβυς.	stinginess , αἰσχροκέρδεια.
carry , φέρω.	free , ἐλεύθερος.
miserly , αἰσχροκερδής.	force , ἀναγκάζω.
get , λαμβάνω (α. ἔλαβον).	devise , ἐξευρίσκω (α. -εὔρον).
in return for , ἀντί, γ.	stratagem , μηχανή.

The Libyans are a strange race, and men tell many singular¹ tales about them. Once a man had a Libyan slave, and he sent him often to a friend with fish, which the Libyan carried. But the friend was miserly, and the slave never got any² gift from him in return for his trouble. So at last he grew angry with him on account of his stinginess, and he was not willing (ἤθελε) to carry¹ anything to him any more. But he was not able to become (γενέσθαι) free, and his master forced him. And on account of this he devised another stratagem as follows.

miser , ὁ αἰσχροκερδής.	bring , φέρω (eis 'in'), (f. οἴσω, a. ἤνεγκον).
abuse , ὀνειδίζω.	properly , πρεπόντως.
say , λέγω.	chair , ἔδρα, f.
young man , νεανίας.	gracefully , χαριέντως.
awkward , ἄγροικος.	give gratitude , χάριν εἶχειν, d.
give , δίδωμι (f. δώσω).	drachma , δραχμή, f.

For, once carrying a fish, he came into his (use ἐκεῖνος) house, and threw down everything which he had on the plate. And the miser got angry and abused him, saying as follows: 'Young man, you are awkward: I myself therefore will bring in the fish, and will give you an example of propriety.' And having said this, he took the plate, and brought it in properly. And the Libyan, sitting in his chair, took the gift gracefully, and said to him: 'We give you much gratitude in return for your trouble, O most beautiful youth, and behold! I give you a drachma.'

EXERCISE XXVIII.

The Egyptian.

VOCABULARY.

write , γράφω (a. f. -γραφ-).	ten , δέκα.
appears , φαίνεται.	suspicion , ὑποψία.
barbarian , βάρβαρος.	for the most part , ὡς ἐπὶ τὸ πολὺ.
divine , θεῖος.	hot , θερμός.
Egyptian , Αἰγύπτιος.	thirst , δίψα, f.
bag , θύλακος, m.	take out , ἐξ-αιρέω, a. -εἶλον.
hide , κρύπτω (a. ἔκρυψα).	eat up , κατ-εσθίω, a. κατ-έφαγον.
apple , μήλον.	again , ἀθῆς.
put , τίθημι (a. ἔθηκα).	come , ἀφικνέομαι, I. ¹

Writing² appears to barbarians to be a very wonderful and divine (thing).

There once was a certain master who had an Egyptian slave. And he sent him to a friend, bearing a bag in which he had hidden³ ten most beautiful and sweet apples. And with the apples he put a letter into the bag, in which he wrote the number of the apples, that there were (say 'are') ten. And this he did from suspicion about⁴ the slave: for the Egyptians are for the most part faithless. And when the sun became (ἐγένετο) hot, and the slave was thirsty (had thirst), at last having taken out two of the apples, he ate them up. But having again hidden the rest in the bag, he came to the friend of his master and gave all to him.

VOCABULARY.

open , ἀνοίγω (a. p. ἀνοίξας).	excuse , πρόφασις, f.
read , ἀναγιγνώσκω (a. p. ἀναγνούς).	tell , ἀγγέλλω (a. ἡγγειλα).
discover , μανθάνω (a. -μαθ-).	I suppose , δήπου.
eight , ὀκτώ.	confess , ὁμολογῶ (a. ὠμολόγησα).
false , ψευδής.	weep , δακρύω.
fellow , ἄνθρωπος.	ask , αἰτέω (a. ἤτησα).
receive , λαμβάνω.	pardon , συγγνώμη.
useless , ἀνωφελής.	pardon (verb), συγγιγνώσκω (a. συνέγγνω).

And the friend taking¹ the bag and opening it, found the apples, being eight, and the letter. And having read this, he discovered that² he sent ten, but only eight remained (say 'remain') now in the bag. Accordingly, growing angry, he abused the slave, and said as follows: 'You are false and untrustworthy, fellow, since (say 'who,' ὅστις) having received ten apples you have only given back³ eight. Why have you stolen³ the two?' But to him it seemed to be useless and foolish to make a false excuse: 'for the letter,' he said to himself, 'saw me eating, and told everything, I suppose.' So he confessed everything, and weeping much, asked him to grant (say 'have') pardon. And he pardoned him: and he went away.

wish , βούλομαι.	skill , τέχνη, f.
fearing , φοβούμενος.	writing , γραφή, f.
knowing , εἰδώς.	splendidly , καλῶς.
how many , ὅσος.	deceive , ἐξαπατάω (a. -ηπάτησ-).
retire , ὑποχωρέω (a. -εχώρησα).	against , κατά, g.

And again the master sent the slave to the same friend, bidding him carry the bag as before, having twenty apples in a letter. And everything occurred (ἐγένετο) as before. For, distressed with the heat of the sun, and having terrible thirst, he wished to eat the apples. But fearing the letter, as knowing how-many apples there were (are), first he hid it under a great stone, and having retired far from thence, he again took out two apples and ate them up. And having done this, he went back again to the stone, and having taken up the letter, put it into the bag, being pleased with his skill, and saying,

O most hateful writing, now indeed I have¹ splendidly deceived you, having before told (agrees with 'you') everything against me.'

And coming to his friend, he gave back the bag, having eighteen [twenty wanting two] apples. He, opening it as before, and finding from the letter that again there was (is) something wanting to the number (gen.), and that not everything was in it which he had sent,¹ then he got very angry with the slave, as being for the second time faithless and impudent. But he, wondering much how² the letter saw what he did, lying far away under a stone, and fearing excessively, told everything to his friend, saying as follows: 'But never again shall I be faithless, most excellent (sir), for now I discover that I am never able to deceive (acc.) these accursed writings, which always saw and noticed everything.' And for the rest of the time he never stole anything more.

as though, ὡς.
pursue, μετελθεῖν.
tied, δεδεμένος.

The Ethiopians, inhabiting a land facing toward the south, consider water to be most precious. And in the same land there is a race of apes, being both otherwise intelligent, and especially clever at finding¹ water. And this they find, as is natural, by the smell, being a long way off. Accordingly the barbarians, having caught one of the apes, and having tied his leg with a thong, lead him through the land. And the ape follows willingly for a time²: but, suddenly getting scent as though from the water, then he no longer is willing to go with those who are leading him,³ but wishes to pursue the smell. And thenceforward he² leads, tied with a thong, and they follow.

VOCABULARY.

cruel , ὠμός.	eager , be , σπουδάξω.
drink , πίνω, I.	spring , κρήνη.
be in a state , ἔχειν, with adv.	smell , ὀσφραίνομαι.
wretched , ταλαίπωρος (adv. -ως).	keep , ἔχω.
be desirous , ἐπιθυμέω, f. -ήσω (with inf.).	nose , ῥίς (ῥιν-), f.
foot , πούς (ποδ-), m.	track , ἵχνεύω.
	stag , ἔλαφος.
	not even , οὐδέ.
	approach , προσελθεῖν.

Now there was a certain Ethiopian, very cruel¹ in his disposition (acc.), who gave no water to the ape to drink: so that the beast was in a very wretched state. For the man said this: ‘He, never drinking anything, will be much more desirous of finding water.’ And he led him, with his feet tied (say ‘tied as to (acc.) his feet’) with a thong, as we said before. And the ape having a most dreadful thirst, was very eager about (use ἐπι) finding² the water, and many springs he found by smelling, keeping his nose close to the earth, like a dog tracking stags. And the Ethiopian, thus finding a spring, drank himself, but did not even allow (εἴα) the faithful ape to approach.

think, φροντίζω, γ.	shot, χωρίον.
sever, διασχίζω, f. -σχισ-.	went off, ἀπώχето.
I will go away, ἄπειμι.	by biting, ὀδᾶξ.
as . . . as possible, ὡς, with	hope, ἐλπίζω.
superl. adv.	hunger, λιμός, m.

But the ape, seeing this, was indignant: for the man seemed to him to be ungrateful and impudent, seeing that he (say 'who,' ὅστις) having found the water by reason of him¹ (reflexive) was not (say 'is not') willing to give him any share. Accordingly, he said to himself as follows: 'My master drinks and does not think of me at all. I therefore will sever the thong with my teeth, and go away as quickly as possible in flight. And he without me will never be able to find the way by which he came hither from home. And thus he will die in this desert spot.' And having such things in his mind, he went off, having cut the thong by biting. And his master, as he hoped, died of hunger² not long after.

dealer , κάπηλος.	touchstone , βάσανος, f.
sir , ὦ ἄνθρωπε.	in truth , τῷ ὄντι.

There was once a thief by name Thepos, who stealing many things by all manner of arts became very famous. For this man, once coming into the market, wished to buy a certain very precious stone, and taking the stone he said to the dealer as follows : ' Sir, I am a stranger, and have come from far : and on this account I have not yet money, such as is current here. Are you willing therefore in place of money to take these ducats ? ' And at the same time, while-saying¹ this he showed him a bag full of golden ducats. And the dealer being experienced in such things, took out one of the ducats, and testing it with a touchstone. discovered it to be (being) in truth golden.

And he took ten ducats from the stranger, and gave him the jewel. And he, taking the bag and the jewel, went away very quickly from the market. And after a not very long time there came to the dealer an archer, as though in a great hurry and considerably alarmed [having much hurry and fear] about something. Now in this city the archers are the guards of the market, searching out everything, and tracking the thieves. He therefore came¹ and asked the dealer as follows: 'Sir, was there here² just now a stranger, buying precious stones and giving in exchange ducats apparently of gold?'³ And the dealer, as was natural, fearing for his jewel, and suspecting Thepos to be a thief,⁴ told everything to the archer and showed him the ducats.

And the archer said: 'All these things are so, as I suspected. For the ducats which you supposed to be golden, having rubbed them with the touchstone, I have¹ often seen already: and they² are not golden at all, but false, made out of copper: but there is gold on the top (say 'lies on them'), so that the touchstone is of course useless with respect to such (coins). But give me the sham gold, which shall give me evidence against the thief.' And taking the ten ducats he went off quickly, as though after Thepos. But the dealer remained many days,³ hoping to see the archer coming back with the jewel and the thief. But as neither came any⁴ more, at last he understood the matter: for the archer was a friend to the thief, and these had⁵ devised the affair.

well-disposed , εὖνους.	satisfactorily , ἐπιεικῶς.
noble , εὐγενής.	ridiculous , γελοῖος.

Formerly¹ kings ruled the Lamioi : but after a certain time the Lamioi, having driven out the kings, chose instead of them other rulers, whom they called tagoi (ταγοί). And in consequence of this there were party quarrels : and the majority were well-disposed to the tagoi, but the nobles being few were² hostile, and would³ not obey. And the tagoi perceiving this grew angry, and employed violence, so that they were no longer able to resist. Nevertheless they were enraged with the tagoi, and invented many⁴ absurd stories about them. And they were in great hopes of⁵ destroying the honour and fame of the tagoi by these stories. For no one can rule satisfactorily and properly, if he becomes⁶ ridiculous to his subjects.

for purpose of , ἐπί, d.	perish , ὀλλυμαι (a. ὀλόμην).

And on account of this reason they ridiculed more easily the tagoi, because the kings, being noble, were in old times skilled¹ in the pleasures² connected with the body, such as hunting, and riding, and gymnastics, and also warlike matters,³ but the tagoi being sprung from the people were much more inexperienced¹ in such things. And the stories were as follows: A tagos, when shooting, turned the point of the arrow towards himself. And, a tagos going out for purpose of hunting, and seeing an elephant, thought it was (to be) a rock.⁴ And, a tagos, riding on the road, fell into a well; and not knowing⁵ how to swim was drowned (say 'disappeared'). And, a tagos meeting a wolf, wished to climb up a tree, and, falling down, was devoured by the wolf. And, a tagos, having girt on him a sword, and getting entangled with the scabbard, fell down, and, having broken his head,⁶ perished.

And another time Thepos wanted to steal an emerald, very precious, from the dealer. And he came¹ to the dealer and chose his emerald, and asked him how much it was [is] worth: and he said 'Ten talents.' And Thepos answered as follows: 'This then I will buy from you: but that large price [the price being so great] I have² in no wise brought [with me], but the money I have left at home. And some other business I must manage in the city, and then go home: and so when I have³ finished everything I will come again to you, and you yourself with me shall go to my house, carrying the emerald: and I having arrived there and taken the stone will pay you the money. And hearing¹ this, the dealer was pleased, and the matter was so settled. For about the most valuable things it was for the most part arranged in some such way as this. And Thepos went away and came to a famous physician, by name Goulos. And he said as follows: 'Goulos, I have a brother in other respects quite well as regards health, but in² one matter diseased and mad. For he is always talking about ten talents, and everywhere giving trouble, and asking everybody as though they owed [owing] this to him. And to others the matter seems to be amusing, but to me most painful. And I will give you an example: for he will come³ here to you and converse probably about ten talents, and will ask you, who have [having] never seen him.'

And the physician, perceiving the matter, answered as follows : ‘ Stranger, it is plain¹ to me that your brother¹ is diseased in² his head : for there is a sort of madness such as that : the man is often in other respects sensible, but about one thing he is out-of-his-mind. Do you then bring your brother hither to me, and I will tend him as well as possible.’ And Thepos, going away to the dealer, ordered him to give him³ the emerald, and to go with him to his house. And he gave him the jewel, and himself went on, leading-the-way to the house of Goulos. And Thepos was just about to knock at the door : but the dealer, perceiving that it was [is] the house of Goulos, and suspecting something, said to him suddenly as follows :

Having told him this he went out, and received the emerald from the dealer, bidding him go in through the door to his guardian and get the price. But at last, being no longer able to endure, 'But why,' said he, 'have¹ you said nothing to me yet about the ten talents?' But he, hearing² this, just as Thepos had¹ foretold, laughed somewhat, and answered as follows:—'Never mind, my dear fellow [O dearest one], about the talents, for your brother explained everything to me, and I pity you as much as possible, being in want of all that money.' And he, suspecting something, and fearing at the same time, and being vexed, said, 'What brother? and how do you mean that you pity me? But I request you to stop from your nonsense, and to pay me the money as quickly as possible.' But after this Goulos examined the matter still more, himself also somehow being frightened, and discovering the trick. The Thessalians sometimes call God Providence, because he foresees everything. And some one once said to a Thessalian farmer, 'How are you, farmer?' and he answered, 'Very badly off.' And the other said 'Why?' and the farmer said as follows:—'On account of this Providence: for the land is tolerably good and excellent, nor do I find fault with the season: but Providence is very hostile; for sometimes¹ he injures my corn, and sometimes my olives: and he is always laying plots against me, so as to spoil (infin.) my fruit. There was once a Thracian, who intended to go abroad into Greece, and travel everywhere through the land alone. But this only was a hindrance to him, that he was not in any way able to speak¹ the language. And at last, having practised, he learnt these words, 'Can you² give me jugged hare?' And everywhere when he came (partic.) into an inn he asked the hostess this, and finding the jugged hare and eating it he was much pleased. And once he arrived at Athens, and searching for an inn, he saw several people going into the Town Hall: and it seemed to him to be a very large inn. So he went in himself also, and finding³ a slave by the door he went up to him and spoke to him in a loud voice⁴ as follows: 'Can you give me jugged hare?' porpoise , κῆτος, n.	make (trial) , λαμβάνω, I.

Wisdom is of course a good thing, and useful to men for (ἐς) the needs¹ of life : but sometimes it is possible to have² practised and to know many things, but to be very foolish (acc.). And a scholar once upon a time was an example of this, for he read many books, but for daily life³ was evidently⁴ very absurd.

For once seeing in summer-time⁵ a river, and wishing to bathe, he jumped down into the water. But not knowing to swim at all, and being frightened, and rolling about in the water like a porpoise, at last he was nearly drowned. But a farmer passing by saved him, pulling him out with a rope, and when he was safe (partic.) he said as follows : 'To-day I will keep away from the water : and to-morrow, having learnt the art of swimming⁶ at home, I will again make trial of the river.'

Another time the scholar keeping a horse, grew vexed on account of the expensiveness, and said to his slave, 'You must not give so much fodder to the horse; for he ought to be kept at a less expense.' And the horse, not having enough to eat, after having been¹ ill for some time, died. But the scholar was very much grieved, lamenting and complaining, for he said as follows, 'How unlucky I am! and all this trouble I have had² in vain. For this horse, having learnt to eat nothing,³ and having become cheap and useful to me, has foolishly died, and all this trouble must begin again from the beginning.' And, seeing the other lying in silence and in a most miserable state, 'Come now,' he said, 'my dear friend (O dearest!), how are you?' But he being all but dead, was naturally not able to make any answer. And the scholar being angry, said, 'Won't¹ you give any answer then to your good kind friend here,² who have³ not spared all this trouble, but, neglecting my business, have come to you and am comforting you?' Aristophanes wrote a comedy about Ploutos, which is very absurd, and gives great pleasure to the reader.¹ For Ploutos at first was blind, and associated with everybody at random, whether (being) good or bad. And a certain Athenian having taken him to the god Asklepios at (to) Epidaurus, cured him of his disease. And when this had taken place,² many wonderful³ things occurred. For the bad⁴ who formerly were rich suddenly were found poor: for an old woman, for example, whom a certain youth favoured for her wealth, he having deserted her, comes forward abusing him violently. When Probos was ruler of the Rōmaioi there was a certain soldier Bōnōsos: and this man, having been reared¹ in Iberia, Probos despatched to Germania, and intrusted the ships to him in that quarter² to prepare. And Bonosos was an intelligent man, but fat in³ his body and given to (turned towards) drunkenness. And at first he was faithful to the ruler as regards the ships: but after a certain time he planned to set on foot a conspiracy, and himself hoped to gain the rule. And having an army at last, he openly revolted. And a general having come against him from Probos, and a battle having taken place, Bonosos was defeated, and, hanging himself with a rope, perished. And the conquerors said, 'Here hangs not a man, but a skin full of wine.'

Mastros was a famous thief, and many things about him have already been told in other books. And once he wished to become leader of the thieves, as being very intelligent, and very clever at deceiving.¹ And when he asked this,² they said to him as follows: 'First you must steal the meat out of the house of the priest, and then, having done this, you shall rule us. But this of course was very difficult, as³ the cook and the other slaves were guarding; and besides these things, the priest charged the slaves to let no⁴ one pass into the house. So Mastros invented a very clever device as follows. Having dressed himself up as an old woman, he took a great bag.

And having bought three hares, he put them into the bag, and, having tied it round with a rope, he went to the house, and asked that¹ it should be permitted him to go in. ‘For I am a wretched old woman,’ said he, ‘and I am exhausted with labour.’ And the slaves were afraid to allow him, the master having forbidden. But at last, seeing that² it was a woman, and suspecting no danger, he let her go in. And Mastros gave great thanks, and going in, sat down by the door. But while the servants were guarding³ the meat as had been told them, and not minding the stranger woman at all, Mastros opening the bag sent one hare through the door. And, jumping up, he shouted with a loud voice, ‘Look! a hare went by.’

And they, greatly surprised, looked into the courtyard, desiring to pursue, but not at all daring to disobey their master. And some one said, 'How unlucky it is, for on¹ the other days we can pursue, but we have never seen a hare: but to-day, when we have seen,² we are compelled to linger in the house.' And Mastros, after a short time, letting go another hare, shouted again yet louder, showing them the beast running away. And they were still more eager to hunt it, but did not yet dare. And at last, the thief letting go the third hare, then the slaves could stand it no longer, but all together were off out of doors in pursuit.³ And he meanwhile snatching up the meat himself too fled away.

When Cōnos was once king of the Indians, the officer died who used¹ to kill those condemned to death.² And, wishing to choose another, Conos called an assembly, and ordered those who wished to have the office of the officer to be present. And there were present three, prepared³ as for the contest, so that they brought out three of the condemned, whom it was necessary to kill, by way of trial. And the first of the competitors cut off the head of the man with one blow. And the second not only cut it off with one blow, but, cutting very skilfully, did not even throw it down from his shoulders. And the third shook his sword for a little, but stopped, not even seeming to have touched⁴ the prisoner. And Conos asking, 'When then will you kill him?' he ordered them to put salt to the nose of the man, and, a sneeze occurring, the head fell off. The king therefore, much pleased, chose this man.

There was once a certain Mōmos, king of the Oneioi, whom the citizens much despised, and often when the king himself was present they ventured to jest and insult him. And he, being easy-tempered, did not care at all nor rebuke them. And a certain woman of the place,¹ having been disgracefully insulted, wished to go to the king and get² assistance, and punish the man who had insulted her. But her father advised her as follows. ‘Ask nothing,’ said he, ‘from him at least, for he who does not assist himself when insulted, how shall such a one assist another?’ But, nevertheless, she went and said² as follows: ‘King! I do not ask for any aid, but I wish to learn from you how, being insulted, I shall bear it with such indifference.’ And he, being vexed, not only assisted her, but for the future punished those who insulted him.

And in other respects the father praised the brothers, as having well executed the matter: but in this he was at a loss, because the eggs were cracked, and it did not seem to be possible to hand over the young alive to the king. Thereupon the youngest son coming forward said, 'I will relieve you from this difficulty.' And at the same time he took the eggs and stitched them knowingly together, and, after two days, the eggs again being cracked, out came five chickens, having no other sign of what had occurred,¹ except that they had a red line round their breast. The Phelioi, having been well treated in many things at the hands of a certain Linios, established a house in their city, wherein it was lawful for all the Linioi to dwell without expense, but it was necessary for the others to pay a stater a day whosoever wished to live there. And once there arose strife and bitter wrath between a Phelios and a Linios, and in quarrelling¹ they reviled each other to a wonderful extent. And the Linios mocking the other, said, 'Behold how much more precious I am than you, for here I live with no expense, where you (live) paying a stater.' But the owl, closing her eyelids slowly and solemnly, said, 'Well, I will give you an example of my philosophy, in what way search is made.¹ For you know, I presume, that the bird arises from the egg, and the egg no less from the bird. It belongs therefore to philosophy to examine thoroughly this (question), whether the egg arose first or the bird. For it is clear that one of the two appeared first, since none of the beasts is by nature immortal or eternal.' 'But what hope is there,' said the cat, laughing, 'to find out such a thing?' Once on a time there were some wonderful weavers, by name Plēkioi, who came to the city of Kōlos. Now Kōlos was a very proud king, but he was not considered to be wise. And the Plekioi asked leave to go to the king, and show off their skill to him. And they came and spoke as follows:— ‘O most mighty king, we should¹ be willing to do you very much good by our art; for we can weave such garments, that² you wearing them shall be able to discern those faithful and unfaithful of all with whom you deal. On these terms¹ therefore the Kilios made a contract with Grympos, and he immediately disappeared. And when day came, the Kilios being aroused out of sleep, and rising up from his bed first was in great perplexity, as he had promised² that he would give (fut. inf.) to Grympos the half of his produce. But at last he devised this (scheme) so as to deceive the spirit. During³ the first year he sowed corn: and thus all the fruit being above ground he had himself, Grympos carrying off what was⁴ below ground and useless. But in the second he sowed onions in the field: and of these the leaves only projected above the earth; and again Grympos got nothing profitable. Accordingly being twice cheated he departed and troubled the Kilios no more.

And sometimes they export dogs and hares and cats: and they tie the tablets in like manner round² these also. And a certain citizen, who happened to be walking in the port, saw a boy with a dog standing by the seaside, and weeping and protesting in a marvellous manner. The priests of the Boeotians teach their children concerning the divine marvels, in order that they may rightly learn about the gods. And once a Boeotian priest was explaining about this, and he asked the children, 'What now would¹ you say if I were to say² I had seen³ the sun in the night?' hoping that some one would answer,⁴ that he had seen (saw) a divine marvel. But the first child, being a rustic, said, 'I for my part should say that you saw not the sun really but the moon.' The Kassiterioi inhabit an island, and practise many strange customs. And on that day on which they elect their governors, which always takes place at intervals of five years, noise and disorder is wont to be in the city, as the worst and most violent men of the populace revel in the streets. And there was a certain Auleides in the city, very clever and quick-witted. And this man, as he was walking quietly through the street, one of the revellers happened¹ to hit with mud, so that all his face was dirtied. And as he was indignant, naturally, the man came up and began to excuse himself. 'For it was you,'² said he, 'I hit, but it was the governor I was aiming at.' There was a certain dealer, by name Prios, in other respects an excellent man, and by nature kind-hearted, but in this sometimes tiresome, that he was wonderfully desirous of knowing things concerning¹ his neighbours: so that he was in danger of being called a busybody. And once when travelling with his pack to Erythrai, the heat being severe, he sat down on the mountain by the road-side under a large tree, so as to rest and take his dinner in quiet. And meanwhile, seeing a Thessalian passing by, as though from Erythrai, Prios, shouting out, asked him whether anything new had happened (say 'happened') there. But he, growing pale and appearing to be alarmed, answered as follows: 'To-day, about noon, a Megarian and a Phokian murdered Amphionidas in Thebes.'

And Prios, being much surprised at what¹ he had learnt, (as to) how² the Thessalian had heard (has heard) so quickly what happened in Thebes about midday, nevertheless was pleased at having³ so great an event to tell everywhere. And arriving at Erythrai, and being about to spend that night at a friend's, he went to the house and related what had happened that same day in Thebes. And the friend replied it was⁴ truly (δῖ) remarkable: for he⁵ himself had not yet heard (perfect) it, though lately⁶ come back from Thebes: but he⁴ (i.e. the other) knew it, having come from the opposite direction. And Prios was at a loss when¹ he heard how the matter really was (is). 'For it is evident,' he said, 'that² the Thessalian told me lies in announcing the man (as) dead. And yet he did not seem at all to be speaking in jest, and at the same time he appeared to be in alarm about³ himself.' But as no clue appeared, bidding farewell to his friend he went off at dawn towards Thebes, and when he was not far off from the city, he fell in with a certain Megarian carrying a burden on his shoulders, and fleeing towards Athens as quick as his feet could bear him.⁴ And Prios, stopping him, asked him about the murder, whether in reality Amphionidas had been put to death (has died) by a Megarian and Phokian yesterday about midday. And he growing pale, and nearly falling down, said this: 'He has been killed by a Phokian: but no Megarian even⁵ came near: nor indeed (was it) yesterday, but to-day about midday.'

And at the same time, having said this, he ran off along the road as though¹ ten thousand Furies were pursuing him. And Prios, still more helpless than before about the matter, remained standing in the road, and searching for the truth. 'It is necessary therefore,' said he after a time to himself, 'to go² myself and see Amphionidas, if in reality he is dead at all.' Thinking of these things, he arrived at nightfall at a certain village, where he had to rest. And having arrived, he conversed with all who were there about the murder, telling³ what had happened, and asking if any one knew (knows) anything more. A certain Chian once journeying with a companion in Asia came to a broad river which it was necessary to cross. And as there was¹ no bridge, the companion was beginning to undress, as though intending to swim. But the Chian said there was no need to cross with so much trouble, for he would manage the matter easier, by throwing him to the further bank. And he said he could not throw him, being a heavy man: for he was willing to bet him a talent of gold. And this he promised, thinking he should either cross the river without trouble, or have a talent of gold. And the Chian having accepted (the bet) and taken him, threw him into the middle of the water. The Malaioi tell many strange stories about the birds, showing whence they know (how)¹ to construct their nests. And they tell the following² (tale): At first the birds by no means were wont to make nests, but deposited their eggs either openly on the grounds, or covered only with grass. But one day there came a phoenix from the rising of the sun, and having gathered together all the birds, he began to teach them how they ought³ to build houses. At first all were silent, and carefully watched him at work (working), considering it a gain if they shall have beautiful houses; but the phoenix first wove together some boughs so as to be a floor of the nest. And when he had finished¹ this, the dove, always having proud thoughts of herself, went away flying and calling out, 'I know surely, I know surely:' and ever since that time she only builds a floor for her eggs, but not a nest. And the phoenix none the less continued building the walls of the house: and when this was done¹ straightway the thrush flew off, calling out, 'Well,² well,' and most of them followed her. For the water of the sea was at first, as they say, sweet like the rivers; but Zeus, in order that it might not be defiled by men and the other animals, devised the following¹ (scheme). For he gave to the king of the Malaioi a certain bag, saying it would be a great gain to him in return for his piety: for whenever he asked² for anything, and said,² 'O bag, I have need of this,' immediately, he promised, from the bag should⁵ appear the thing asked for. EXERCISE CXVI.

Birds.

VOCABULARY.

Malaioi, Μαλαῖοι.shew, δηλώω.whence, ὅθεν.construct, κατασκευάζω.I am wont, εἶωθα.deposit, κατατίθεσθαι.cover, κρύπτω.grass, πόα.phœnix, φοῖνιξ (-νικ-).rising, ἀντολαί.build, οἰκοδομέω.stick, κάρφος, π.

The Malaioi tell many strange stories about the birds, showing whence they know (how)¹ to construct their nests. And they tell the following² (tale): At first the birds by no means were wont to make nests, but deposited their eggs either openly on the grounds, or covered only with grass. But one day there came a phœnix from the rising of the sun, and having gathered together all the birds, he began to teach them how they ought³ to build houses. And taking branches and sticks, he himself in the presence⁴ of them all proceeded to⁵ build a nest, very cleverly and skilfully, making it an example in order that⁶ the rest might learn at the same time. And he thought that this would be pleasing to them, and that they would have much gratitude to him.

Birds—continued.

VOCABULARY.

floor , ἔδαφος, η.	wall , τοῖχος.
dove , περιστερά.	thrush , κίχλη.
have proud thoughts of , μέγα φρονεῖν ἐπί, δ.	fly off , ἀποπέτομαι.
surely , τοι.	to this day , ἔτι καὶ νῦν.
since , ἐξ.	up to , μέχρι, γ.
continue , διατελέω.	roof , ὀροφή.

At first all were silent, and carefully watched him at work (working), considering it a gain if they shall have beautiful houses; but the phoenix first wove together some boughs so as to be a floor of the nest. And when he had finished¹ this, the dove, always having proud thoughts of herself, went away flying and calling out, 'I know surely, I know surely:' and ever since that time she only builds a floor for her eggs, but not a nest. And the phoenix none the less continued building the walls of the house: and when this was done¹ straightway the thrush flew off, calling out, 'Well,² well,' and most of them followed her. So that to this day the birds build up to the walls. But the swallow alone remained watching the whole work, and learned to make a roof: and therefore she alone builds a nest complete and having a roof.

EXERCISE CXVIII.

The Sea.

VOCABULARY.

salt (adj.), ἀλμυρός.defile, μαιίνω.piety, εὐσέβεια.moderate, μέτριος.threaten, ἀπειλέω.

And the same Malaioi tell another tale about the sea, explaining how it became salt. For the water of the sea was at first, as they say, sweet like the rivers; but Zeus, in order that it might not be defiled by men and the other animals, devised the following¹ (scheme). For he gave to the king of the Malaioi a certain bag, saying it would be a great gain to him in return for his piety: for whenever he asked² for anything, and said,² ‘O bag, I have need of this,’ immediately, he promised, from the bag should⁵ appear the thing asked for. But at the same time he ordered him to be moderate in his use³ of the bag, and not⁴ to ask for anything except what was necessary: otherwise he threatened that he should⁵ suffer many dreadful things. But the king, taking the gift, was wonderfully delighted.

EXERCISE CXIX.

get ready, ἐτοιμάζω.banquet, δείπνον.good fortune, εὐτυχία.salt, ἄλας, η.pour out, ἐκχέω.bitter, πικρός.

And for a long time he used the bag very moderately, only asking for necessary things, and always receiving from it great plenty. But once he was sailing across the sea, with many companions, and as everything had¹ succeeded for him, for which he had¹ sailed out, being in a great (state of) delight he ordered the sailors to get ready a banquet to celebrate² his good fortune. And when everything was prepared, some one of the Malaioi told the king that they had (have) no salt. But he, thinking³ it was necessary, asked the bag to give it, fearing however secretly somewhat, but being ashamed on account of the sailors. And immediately the bag being open proceeded to⁴ pour out so much salt that the ship was sunk, and those on board at the same time: nor did it cease even⁵ then, but even to this day it lies down below pouring out salt: so that the sea has become bitter.

EXERCISE CXX.

Shooting over the Moon.

VOCABULARY.

pride one's-self on, μέγα	powerfully, ισχυρῶς.
φρονεῖν ἐπί.	promise, ὑπόσχεσις, f.
Crete, Κρήτη.	new moon, νουμηνία.
Cretan, Κρήσις.	make haste, ἐπείγασθαι.
let fly, ἀφίημι, I.

There was a certain archer in Crete, very skilful in shooting,¹ but at the same time accustomed to pride himself on his art. And once in the presence of a Boeotian, the Cretan said he was able to let fly his arrow so powerfully that it should fly over the moon. And the Boeotian with a laugh said, 'I promise to pay you a talent of gold when you have done this.'² For he knew of course that it was³ impossible. But the Cretan having accepted his promise, bade him be present on the following night, when it happened to be⁴ new moon. And when they were come the moon appeared about to set: accordingly the Boeotian ordered him to make haste, on the plea that the moon would disappear directly. But he, keeping silent and quiet, when⁵ at last she disappeared, shot his bolt at once. And having shot, he said, 'Pay the talent: for I have shot over the moon, since she is gone under the sea, but I have shot my arrow over the sea.'

EXERCISE CXXI.

Education.

VOCABULARY.

magistrate, ἄρχων (-οντ-).	at Athens, Ἀθήνησι.
Κρίση, Κρισαῖοι.	fee, μισθός.
to Athens, Ἀθήναζε.	borrow, δανείζομαι.
sophist, σοφιστής.

There was a certain youth dwelling in Krise, being the son of the magistrate of the Krisaioi. And he went abroad to Athens in order that he might learn¹ philosophy from the sophists there; and when he was going away his father gave him plenty of money, so that he should be² able to live at Athens one year, and pay the sophists their fee. And the boy, having arrived at the city, and having met another young man who had been³ an acquaintance (of his) previously, asked him to advise him what he ought⁴ to do, and in what way to live. And he gave him much strange advice [advised many strange things], and in return for many gifts he taught him very cleverly to borrow money. Accordingly, when the year was ending, and his father asked him if the money proved sufficient which he had received at his departure, he said, 'Certainly it proved sufficient: for it was on account of this I was able to borrow the rest.'

¹ Final, § 70.³ Tenses, § 57.² Use ὥστε with the Accusative and Infinitive.⁴ Use Present Optative of δεῖ.

Note on Interrogatives and Relatives.

Our words which, when, where, etc., in English (most of them beginning with wh-) are represented by different words in Greek according to the meaning. They are best classified as under; taking the word where for example we get the following various usages:—

- (1.) Interrogative direct (int. dir.).

Where are you?
 ποῦ εἶ;

- (2.) Interrogative indirect (int. ind.).

I don't know where you are.
 οὐκ οἶδα ποῦ }
 ἔστ. } ἔσπου }

- (3.) Relative (rel.).

The place where I found.
 τὸ χωρίον ὁπερ } ὃδ } ὅπου }

And in some of them we get a fourth kind:—

- (4.) Exclamatory (excl.).

What a fellow!
 οἷος ἀνθρώπος.

To save repetition in the Vocabulary this table may be referred to:—

	Direct Interrog.	Indirect Interrog.	Relative.	Exclamatory.

LIST OF SYMBOLS AND ABBREVIATIONS USED.

a. accusative.	m. masculine.
adj. adjective.	mid. middle voice.
adv. adverb.	met. metaphorical.
conj. conjunction.	n. neuter.
d. dative.	pl. plural.
f. feminine.	s. substantive.
g. genitive.	v. verb. intr. intransitive.

† before a particle means that it can only occur after some other word in a clause.

I. after a Verb means that it is irregular, and that the Irregular Tenses will be found in the list : but compound verbs will be found in the list under the simple forms.

(-ος -ον) after an Adjective means that it has only two terminations.

The comparative and superlative suffixes are given in brackets after the adjectives : and adverbs are made by altering the -ος or -ης of the adjective into -ως (unless otherwise stated).

NOTE.—Substantives in -ος (unless otherwise stated) are declined like λόγος, and are masculine.

Substantives in -η and -α are (unless otherwise stated) feminine, and declined like φίλια and μουσα and τιμή.

Substantives in -ις (unless otherwise stated) are feminine, and declined like πόλις.

Substantives neuter in -α are declined like σώμα—σώματος. Verbs, with no note of a case after them, if transitive in English, take the accusative.

The stem of a substantive, where it might be doubtful, is given in parentheses, as δρnis (-νιθ-).
